Davey Defies U.S. To Slash Ohio Pensions

Governor Terms Criticism By Federal Board Prior to Primary 'Political Maneuvering;' State Officials Absent At Hearing.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Gov. Martin L. Davey, laying responsibility for any major shortcomings of Ohio's administration of old age pensions on the social security board itself, defied the board today to cut off federal pension grants.

"Frankly, I do not believe you dare deprive these aged citizens of one-half their scant living to support your political maneuver," Davey said in a letter to A. J. Altmeyer, board chairman. "It would be an act of cruel tyranny which not even a political faker could justify."

The board opened a hearing yesterday on whether to suspend federal grants to Ohio's old age assistance program because of allegations the state administration did not meet federal requirements.

Ohio officials had been requested to attend, but none was present. Nevertheless, the board proceeded with its own witnesses and heard testimony from its investigators that the Ohio administration was permeated with politics and was inefficient.

Their statements included assertions that requests for old-age assistance directed personally to Davey received preferential treatment, that personnel had been ap-

INCREASE OF AT LEAST 100 SEEN FIRST DAY

SIMPSON ROOMS CROWDED

600 Boys and Girls Enter School for First Time; State Total Drops.

A record enrollment of approximately 6,400 pupils was in prospect today for Mansfield schools as the city's 13 public schools began their 1938-39 term.

Increased opening day enrollments were reported at most of the buildings and indications were that the total figures would show an increase of at least 100 over the 6,360 pupils who attended classes last year.

1,263 at Senior High.

The Senior high school registrations showed that 41 new pupils from other districts had registered. while the total enrollment so far is 1,263. That figure is slightly under enrollment last spring, but school officials predicted a number of other pupils would register during the first week of school.

Class rooms were crowded at John Simpson Junior high school where 60 new pupils from outside the city were enrolled. At Senior high school, pupils overflowed into the auditorium and cafeteria because of crowded conditions in study halls.

Short class periods today were to permit pupils to go home early this afternoon, principals said. With the class program set up, however, pupils will start in on the full time schedule tomorrow.

First Grade Enrollment Up.

Nearly 600 boys and girls went to school today for the first time, Supt. W. L. Miller said. That number is a slight increase over last year's first grade enrollment.

In the entire state, E. N. Dietrich, Ohio director of education, estimated that the enrollment would be 1,231,200, a decrease of 15,000 from last year. A declining birth rate in the state accounted for the drop, with approximately 10,000 fewer first grade pupils starting school this year than in 1937.

Enrollment at St. Peter's parochial school which opened yesterday, showed a slight increase to nearly 900 pupils.

Principal Jesse Beer at Senior high school said 17 pupils who graduated last year had returned for post graduate work, considerably more than the post gradu-

NEW CLUES SPUR HUNT FOR KILLER

Children Tell of Being Molested as Police Probe Girl's Death.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H.—(INS)—A man who wore blue trousers and a green sweater, known to have molested several small children within the past week, was sought by police today in connection with the brutal slaying of 8-year-old Barbara Driscoll whose body, with skull crushed by a rock, was found beneath a railroad shed.

Authorities still held one man, an ex-convict, arrested near the scene of the slaying. Authorities, however, were inclined to believe his denial of any part in the crime, and a checkup confirmed his story of his activities.

The new clue involving the man with blue trousers and green sweater was provided by seven small girls.

Playlots Have Greatest Year, Attendance Up 300 Per Cent

Mansfield's 13 playgrounds had their greatest season in history this summer when more than 180,000 took part in the activities, the final report of Playground Director Al Fendrick showed today.

Official attendance at the 13 grounds was 181,790, an increase of 136,796 or more than 300 per cent over the 1937 total which was 44,994. Attendance at the grounds in 1936 was 40,162.

The average weekly attendance for the summer was 18,972 as compared with 5,624 for the previous year, the report shows.

Largest attendance was at Johns park where 37,503 children took part in activities Total attendance at that park in 1937 was 10,100. Second largest attendance was at North Lake park with 24,352, and Prospect park was third with 22,001.

More persons participated in tennis activities at the parks than in any other sport, the report shows The tennis attendance for the summer was 37,083. Baseball attracted 19,900, swimming 3,595, handicraft 2,526, safety town 690 and special events drew 4,350.

Fendrick attributed the record increase to the addition of seven new playgrounds to the system and the employment of more supervisors.

'Swing' In Factories? Here It Is

Music Steps Efficiency Up, Betters Morale, Scientist Finds.

(Note to A. E. Allen at Westinghouse, J. M. Hill at Empire, Paul Tappan at Tappan Stove, George W Stephens at Mansfield Tire, George Draffan at Ohio Brass, Harold G. Balyeat at Balyeat Manufacturing, W. G. Moore at Humphryes, and any other plant executives we may have missed: Have you ever thought of trying swing music in your plants to promote efficiency and morale?)

NOW, gentlemen, don't snort at the idea—we're passing it on to you in an absolutely serious way. It isn't an original thought with us, you understand. We don't know whether it would work or not. But we do know of a fellow who says it is great stuff.

And we thought you'd like to know.

It's this way. The American Psychological association is having a convention in Columbus. One of the speakers today was John F. Humes. He is psychologist at Penn State college.

* * *

He told the audience—which probably consisted chiefly of other psychologists—that the playing of phonograph records in a radio tube factory, where the employes were mostly women, had increased efficiency.

He said that when the phonograph music was being played, they performed their duties with less "scrappage." The music isn't to be played continously, it seems. A couple of records at half hour intervals will do.

Not only was there less "scrappage" but, according to Humes, "from the point of view of plant morale it cannot be denied that music is highly beneficial and desirable."

So we thought it wouldn't be a bad idea to pass Mr. Humes' suggestions along to you.

* * *

In some of your plants, gentlemen, you'd have to play pretty loud music, to drown out the noise of the factory. Still, that probably could be arranged.

Maybe we don't know anything about manufacturing, but we're just a little curious to see what the effect would be (personal note to Mr. Tappan) if some of Benny

Dr. John E. Worden, third Democratic candidate who also said he would be a solid supporter of the New Deal, was out of the race almost from the start.

Returns from 215 precincts gave:

McCarran 13,485.

Hilliard 4,278.

GAS BILL OK'D ON 3RD READING

But Shelby Council Defers Final Passage of Rate Measure to Sept. 19.

SHELBY—Council came a step closer to approving a new gas rate contract with the Ohio Fuel Gas company last night, but after approving a third reading of the measure, deferred final passage until Sept. 19.

The delay was granted at the request of Councilman Charles Swanger who vigorously opposed the three-year ordinance, and voted against it on third reading. The vote was 3-1, Councilman Kenneth Roethlisberger having left the meeting before the roll was called, at the conclusion of a lengthy argument over rates.

About 15 residents attended the meeting—the first time since the question has been before council this has occurred. Many voiced opposition to the rate.

Swanger contended that Shelby should have a rate as low as Mansfield. Under the new ordinance, a 5,000-foot user in Shelby would pay 69½ cents per thousand, while the consumer in Mansfield would pay 65 cents for the same amount.

"Why should the gas company take $12,000 or $15,000 more per year from Shelby's 1,800 consumers that it would get from the same number of consumers in Mansfield?" Swanger asked.

Exile's Grave Awaits Count, Once Heir to Spanish Throne

(By International News Service)

MIAMI, Fla. — Harried to the very death by his family's hereditary malady, the body of the Count De Covadonga, once heir to the Spanish throne, was prepared today for an exile's grave.

The 31-year-old eldest son of the former King Alfonso of Spain died yesterday nine hours after he was injured in an automobile accident while riding with a pretty night club cigaret girl

Although the immediate cause of death was listed as heart failure and shock doctors said he would not have succumbed to his injuries save for the loss of blood.

The count was afflicted with hemophilia, sometimes referred to as the "scourge of the Bourbons" but more properly designated as the Battenberg malady, that prevents coagulation of the blood.

It had been passed from generation to generation of men linked with the Battenberg line, of which his mother is one, by the women who themselves remained free from it.

Word of the count's death was cabled to the former King Alfonso in Rome and Queen Victoria in London. It was believed they would have the body sent to Europe for burial, although not in Spain due to the civil war and their own exile.

His forehead was severely cut and his leg broken in the auto crash early yesterday when his companion, Miss Mildred Gaydon, 25, swerved the car into a telegraph pole to avoid a truck. She was merely bruised and was released on her own recognizance after being formally charged with manslaughter pending an inquest today.

Nazis to Use Force Soon If Czech Problem Remains Unsolved, Belief.

BULLETIN

NURNBERG, Germany—(AP)—A high government spokesman said today that the purport of Adolf Hitler's admonition to Konrad Henlein on the Czechoslovak government's latest offer of concessions was: "Don't accept; ask for more and you will get it!"

(By Associated Press)

France placed Marseille, her chief Mediterranean port, under military control and poured additional troops into the Maginot Line today while Europe watched Nurnberg, Germany, for a possible meeting between Adolf Hitler and the British ambassador to Berlin.

War or peace in Europe, London observers believed, may hang on whether Sir Nevile Henderson gets a chance to discuss the Czechoslovak situation with the German chancellor at the reception for diplomats attending the Nazi party congress.

Thought Britain Bluffed.

These observers said Hitler had not been informed fully concerning the chances of Britain's fighting against the reich to defend Czechoslovakia if she is attacked. The German foreign minister, Joachim von Ribbentrop, did not at once tell Hitler of his conversations with Sir Nevile, it was said, because he professed to believe Britain was bluffing.

The general feeling in German official circles was that Hitler would wait the remainder of this week for the Czechoslovak government to present a peace plan acceptable to the Sudeten Germans.

If by Monday, the closing day of the congress, he is convinced the Sudetens and the Czechs cannot get together, it was believed, he may attempt some other way

Answer to Problems By Miss Fairfax

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have finished my sophomore year at the state university, and I realize fully that mother and dad gave up a good deal to let me have those two years, which I think is enough of college life. Boys who've graduated with high honors have just as hard times getting jobs as boys who haven't been through high school. So, I want to quit.

My real reason for leaving is that I've fallen desperately in love with a girl three years older than I am, and if I don't marry her now, she's too attractive to wait for me. Mother and dad are pretty sore about this, because they've heard she's wild. And while it's true that she does smoke and drink, and there has been silly gossip about her, she's the most fascinating girl I've ever known. And I want to marry her.

Won't you say a good word for the situation? Also won't you please state the obvious truth that people who haven't had college educations get along as well, or better, than those who have had them? My folks read your column.

Sophomore.

If you expect me to be an advocate for the foolish course you propose, I've got to disappoint you. You haven't said whether you expect to bring the bride home to your parents to support, but I conclude that's the program. And your mother and father are justified in declining to accept the responsibility.

Please don't throw away all your chances of success and happiness in life, just because you think you're in love. For your own sake, let someone else have this wild peach.

* * *

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 19 years old, and my husband is 21. I've been married only four months. Two weeks ago, we had a quarrel over a misunderstanding, and he slapped me. Several quarrels have followed, and I haven't been happy since.

I don't want to turn to my family for help, as they did not give their consent to my marriage. I have written a letter to a friend in another city, and she has offered to help me.

Please advise me as to my next step in troubles like mine.

M.

Like the one swallow which doesn't mean summer, one slap may not mean that your husband belongs to the gorilla wife-beating type, and that he will again revert to his jungle behavior. You know more about the friend in another city than I do. Has she got a job? Could she get you a job? If you go to her for a protracted visit, she may become tired of the arrangement.

Before taking this positive step, why not talk things out with your husband. Tell him definitely that the indoor sport of wife-beating is out, and that you're willing to give him another trial. Meantime, I'd try to become reconciled to my family. Even if they did not consent to your marriage, like most families, they'd probably agree to forgive and forget.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

THERE IS something infectious about Lillian's tackling of any task which lies before her. There is such an aura of cheerful resolution about her which skips lightly over obstacles that it imbues everyone around her, even the naturally timorous, with courage.

Thus I found my own spirits, so depressed by my telephone conversation with Philip Veritzen, distinctly rising as I went up the stairs with her, and softly knocked at the door of the room where Queen Olga lay under Katherine's care.

Olina opened the door, and, putting my finger against my lips for silence, I beckoned her into the hall. She caught the cue and said no word of greeting, simply slid noiselessly out of the door, closing it cautiously after her.

"We do not wish to disturb your mother," I said, "but we wish to speak with Mrs. Bickett as soon as she can leave what ever she is doing. We will keep her less than five minutes. Can you give her this message without your mother's hearing it?"

Mother Comfortable.

"But of course," Olina replied promptly. "And I think Mrs. Bickett can come out almost at once. Maman is resting so comfortably, and she really enjoyed her supper. I am so relieved about her. I was afraid—"

Her voice quavered, stopped, as she frantically caught at her self-control and regained it.

"I will give Mrs. Bickett your message as soon as I can manage it without Maman's suspecting anything," she said. Turning, she walked back into the room, her head held high, her lithe, young body firmly erect.

Lillian looked after her speculatively, her forefinger tapping against her lips in a mannerism of hers when she scents some new problem. But she did not speak until the door had closed and we had withdrawn to a window seat in the upper hall which commanded a full view of the room with the barred windows.

"That's a very emotional young woman beneath her poise," she said thoughtfully when we were seated. "I wonder—"

She broke off abruptly and traced a pattern on the rug with the toe of her shoe.

"Yes?" I said hopefully, knowing that it was safe to disturb her. When she is up against a really difficult problem, she cups her chin in her hands, rests her elbows on her knees and stares into space. When she takes that attitude it is a brave soul, indeed, who ventures to disturb her.

"I'm just wondering what her reactions are to Noel about now," she said.

"You mean you think she may become romantically interested in Noel again?" I asked, dismayed.

"I mean she's a strong-willed, highly-strung young woman who has been through tremendously upsetting experiences." Lillian said slowly. "She has been torn up by the roots from her old life, and her transplanting into the new has been crude. And there's a ruthless streak in her, or I miss my guess."

"Which spells?" I prompted as she paused.

"Which may spell a campaign for Noel," Lillian answered.

No Obstacle.

"But—" I faltered aghast, "Noel and Mary are married."

Lillian smiled synically.

"Have you known that little obstacle to discourage many of these modern babies?" she asked. "And Olina, despite her rigid training, outmoderns the most up-to-date young American damsel, or my powers of observation have become atrophied. Of course, all this is conjecture, but I'm going to watch her very closely when she meets Noel tonight, and I wish you'd keep your eyes open also."

"When she meets Noel tonight," I said puzzled. "But I thought we were going—"

"To keep Phil from seeing Olga," she finished. "Correct. We are. That poor woman isn't going to see him until she's perfectly able to cope with him. Katherine can manage that. But Olina isn't ill, and if I know Phil Veritzen, he's going to be most insistent that he and Noel have a chance to talk to Queen Olga's daughter."

"You wanted me?" Katherine asked, laughing softly as we stared at her. We had been so absorbed in our colloquy and she had come up so noiselessly that we had not seen her until she spoke.

"And how!" Lillian said. "Sit ye down, and we'll spoon the lentils."

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

"The Authority on Authorities"

JUST A BIT EXTRA

ODDS IN FAVOR of redoubles are so great that it is surprising how few of them are made. If the chances appear to be about even to make your contract, after you have been doubled, it will pay you in the long run to redouble. In a major suit game, you stand to win an extra 240 points by redoubling and to lose only an extra 100 points when not vulnerable, 200 when vulnerable. So you don't need a pile of additional unshown strength to render your redouble sound, only the slightest bit extra.

North's opening bid here was 1-Club, which East overcalled with 1-Diamond, South called 1-Spade and west passed. North's next bid was 1-No Trump and South bid 2-Hearts. When North raised to 3-Hearts, South went to 4-Hearts. East doubled and South redoubled.

The diamond 3 was West's original lead and was won with dummy's A. The heart A was then cashed and followed with a heart. East went in with the K to lead his singleton spade 10. South captured this with the A and drew East's last trump. Then followed the spades K and Q, a diamond being discarded on the latter. The club J was next offered and the finesse lost to East's Q. East returned a diamond for a ruff by South. The club 9 then followed, which East won with the A. The diamond K was ruffed with the heart 9, the spade 6 with the heart 10 and the club K was the last trick. Declarer lost one heart and two clubs.

What is the correct bidding on this deal?

Most amateurs have found that it is exceedingly difficult, if not impossible, to grow lettuce successfully during the summer months. With the approach of cooler weather, however, they will again have success, especially if the ground is rich and plenty of water is used. Lettuce will stand up under the first light frosts, and can be protected by a little hay at night when the weather gets cold.

Conserve, New Pudding Offered

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

It's just about time, we think, for another of those popular grab bags with a prize recipe for everyone.

Ripe grape conserve has the honor of leading off the toothsome parade. Ingredients for this delicious conserve include four cups (two pounds) prepared fruit, grated lemon rind, one-quarter cup lemon juice, seven cups (three pounds) sugar, one-half pound seeded raisins, one cup finely-chopped nut meats and one-half bottle fruit pectin. To prepare fruit, stem and crush well about three pounds fully-ripe grapes! Add one-quarter cut water, bring to a boil and simmer, covered, 30 minutes. Remove seeds and skins by sieving. If desired, chop or grind skins and add to pulp. Grate rind and squeeze juice from two lemons. Measure sugar and prepared fruit into large kettle, filling up last cup with water if necessary. Add lemon rind and juice, raisins and nut meats, mix well, and bring to full rolling boil over hottest fire. Stir constantly before and while boiling. Boil hard one minute. Remove from fire and stir in bottled fruit pectin. Then skin, and stir by turns for just about five minutes to cool slightly to prevent floating fruit. Pour quickly. Paraffin hot conserve at once. This recipe makes about 12 glasses of six fluid ounces each.

Carrot Pudding.

When the weather gets cooler, here's a grand recipe if you want to cook something different. Carrot pudding requires one cup ground, raw carrots, one cup ground, tart apples, one cup raisins, one-half cup brown sugar, one-half cup molasses, one cup ground suet, one-half teaspoon soda, one tablespoon baking powder, one cup flour, one-half cup fine bread crumbs, one-half teaspoon each of cloves, nutmeg and cinnamon. Cut apples in small pieces before putting through grinder. Put carrots and apples through grinder. Mix all ingredients; put in well-greased mold and steam two to two and one-half hours, depending on size of mold.

THEATER

SAM JAFFE, character man, who did so swell a job as the ancient High Lama in "Lost Horizon," will be seen again in "Gunga Din." He is playing a native elephant rider. . . . "Unfit to Print," Pat O'Brien's next picture, will bring Joan Blondell back to the screen for the first time since the birth of her second child. . . . "Titanic" is the tentative title of a picture which will revolve around the sinking of the giant luxury liner which went down in 1912 with most of its passengers, many of whom were world famous figures. The studio is working on research now and the picture will be made some time next year.

* * *

Glamor for Martha.

A new Martha Raye, with "glamor," will make her appearance in "Give Me a Sailor," the musical in which the Oh-o-o-Boy star gets a chance to forget her slap-stick past. Bob Hope, who scored in "Big Broadcast of 1938," plays opposite Miss Raye as a love-sick gob, while Jack Whiting, recruited from the stage, makes a third star in the picture which will be shown at the Ohio the last half of the week.

* * *

Starlets In Film.

Irene Dare, the world's youngest fancy ice skater, is featured in Bobby Breen's starring picture, "Breaking the Ice," which the Madison will show for three days, starting Thursday. Charlie Ruggles and Dolores Costello head the supporting cast in this story of a boy and his widowed mother. Bobby is a two-fisted fighter who meets adventure and emerges triumphant and singing.

* * *

Jungle Filmed.

Clyde E. Elliott, the man who directed "Bring 'Em Back Alive" and "Devil Trigger," is responsible for the film "Booloo," tale of the Malayan jungle, which is one of the two features at the Majestic. It's the tale of a young Englishman who goes to the jungle for a fabulous white tiger. Wallace Beery in "Viva Villa," a re-issue, is the second feature, starting today.

Comedy at Ritz.

Alice Brady, married to Guy Kibbee in "Mama Steps Out," goes to Europe in search of culture and meets a strange crew of "pretenders" who give the folks from the middlewest something to think about. Betty Furness and Stanley Morner, as mama's daughter and her beau, provide the romance in this typical Brady comedy. It is a picturization of the play "Ada Beats the Drum." It is current at the Ritz.

DAVEY DEFIES PENSION BOARD

Terms Criticism by U. S. Prior to Primary as 'Political Maneuver' in Ohio.

pointed on the basis of "political and personal influence," and that pension recipients had been told it would be a "good idea" to vote for Davey.

When the hearing concluded, Altmeyer observed that it was "reasonable to assume" that the failure of Ohio officials to attend was "an admission of the truth of the charges," but that the record would be held open for "a reasonable time" for any reply.

Frank Bane, the board's executive director, told reporters later that a reasonable time probably would be a week or 10 days. Ohio has received its old age assistance allotment for September.

Plane Carries Letter.

Davey's letter, flown here by a member of his secretariat, was delivered after conclusion of the hearing It described the charges as "so general" and "so non-specific" that they could not be answered, but said all were "denied categorically"

The governor continued that the board had had auditors and agents in the Ohio division for two and one-half years and had been "in virtual control of the Ohio program"

"If there have been any failures of consequence, it is your own fault, because the mere threat of withholding federal funds would have brought prompt action," he added

As to political activity in connection with the pensions, Davey recalled that the charges were brought three days before the Ohio Democratic primary in which he was defeated for renomination and said they were intended "to scare 110 000 helpless old people into voting against myself"

"This was surprisingly dirty politics for one who pretends to be as righteous as yourself" he said

There was no immediate word as to whether the board would accept Davey's letter as Ohio's full reply to the charges and proceed to rule on the question of continued grants.

Board figures show Ohio received $36 648 162 from February 1936 through Sept 2 1938 Grants for last quarter the board said totaled $4,416 198

Davey inquired in his letter if "All Americans must bow before the imperial throne of federal agencies"

"I wrote the old age pensioners a letter asking for their support on the basis of the many things I have tried to do for them," Davey told Altmeyer

"There was enclosed in this letter a little booklet written by the chief of the division, telling the story of our efforts in behalf of these aged people . . .

"My opponent (Charles Sawyer) also wrote a letter to all the old age pensioners soliciting their support. Such activity can not be moral in one case and immoral in another

"I gave specific orders that the employes of the Ohio division should not work politically among the old age pensioners, but other friends were permitted to do so. . . .

"On the other hand, lieutenants of my opponent called on the old age pensioners immediately following your political blast, and told them that if they voted for Davey they would lose half their pensions Their action had all the appearance of collusion with yours"

Governor Davey also charged that the federal government used the WPA setup against his bid Aug. 9 for a third nomination.

"In the last Ohio primary campaign the whole WPA machinery was used against us without blushing" Davey branded the result as the luck of politics, adding:

"But I do complain when we are charged with minor offenses, while these great federal agencies are used with reckless unconcern to make and unmake men in current public life. . . ."

NEW LIGHT UP

Signal Controls Traffic at 2nd and Mulberry Streets.

A new traffic light installed at the cost of $300 today controlled traffic at the intersection of West Second and South Mulberry streets.

The light in operation since Saturday, today was cut into the downtown circuit which synchronizes its operation with that of the other signals in the business area, City Electrician Ernest Adams said

The signal was placed at the intersection after more than 200 residents in the First Ward petitioned city council three months ago asking protection at this intersection.

GETS $103,000 FOR DITCH JOB

County Receives New WPA Allocation: Project to Provide Work for 150.

A WPA allocation for $103,252 for a ditch and flood control project in Richland county was approved today by President Roosevelt, dispatches from Washington said today.

The allocation will supplement a $28,268 contribution by the county for dredging Ritter's run and Touby's run in Mansfield and a number of ditches over the county, County Engineer Howard C. Sword said. Retaining walls and levees would also be constructed, the engineer said

Designed to provide work for 150 men for a year, the project probably will not be started until winter weather forces a halt in road and bridge work in the county, Sword said.

He indicated the project would be used as a means of giving year-round work to a part of the men now employed on county WPA jobs.

An additional 100 men were scheduled to go to work today on WPA road and bridge projects in the county, boosting the total employment list to about 600, Sword said.

Faces New Cross-Quiz on $30,000 Payment to Hines

EX-GANGSTER ON STAND IN RACKETS CASE

State Nears Completion of Testimony in Trial of Tammany Leader.

NEW YORK—With the state's case fast drawing to a close, Defense Counsel Lloyd Stryker today resumed cross examination of Harry "The Horse" Schoenhaus, 43, paymaster of the old Dutch Schultz policy mob.

The hulking former mobster, who testified that he paid Tammany District Leader James J. Hines more than $30,000 for the political campaign of Former District Attorney William Dodge, was in buoyant spirits as he faced Stryker.

Schoenhaus acknowledged that before telling his story, so closely dove-tailing with previous recitals by J. Richard (Dixie) Davis and George Weintraub, he had read their testimony.

He said he saw Weinberg last Friday and Davis two weeks ago.

Schoenhaus denied he talked with Weinberg about his testimony.

The big ex-gangster seemed to have difficulty remembering events.

Changes Testimony.

At first, he "remembered" a meeting in May, 1932, at which Dutch Schultz announced that he had made an "arrangement" with the 61-year-old defendant, Hines, to protect the policy racket.

Then he modified his tetimony. He said he "thought" it was at this conference that Schultz named Hines.

Supreme Court Justice Ferdinand Pecora took over the questioning and sought to elicit the information himself.

"What did Schultz say about Hines?"

"He asked if the bankers were satisfied with the way things were going." Schoenhaus said, apparently failing to understand the question.

"Did anybody mention Hines?"

"I can't remember," Schoenhaus said.

Stryker questioned him about another conference of the catchpenny "numbers game" operators summoned by Schultz.

The witness, urged by Stryker to take all the time he needed to refresh his memory, finally thought that Hines' name "may have been mentioned" at the second conference.

"Have you any definite recollection?" asked Justice Pecora.

Schoenhaus shook his head. "No"

17 Navy Bombers on Mass Flight to Pearl Harbor

SAN DIEGO, Cal.—(U.P.)—Seventeen twin-motored navy patrol bombers carrying 119 officers and men were reported "on course" today on a 2,570-mile mass flight from San Diego to Pearl harbor, Hawaii.

Flight Commander Aaron P. Storrs radioed the squadron's position at 2 a. m. PST (5 a. m. EST) as 1,640 miles west of San Diego.

Less than 10 hours after its takeoff at 1:57 p. m. PST (3:57 p. m. EST) yesterday the squadron passed the half-way point in its flight to the islands.

The planes composed squadron four and are of the consolidated PBY-type, twin motored and carry full crews of seven. Upon delivery in Hawaii they will be stationed at the fleet air base in Pearl harbor as part of patrol wing two.

Up and Down THE STREET

A marriage license issued yesterday in probate court may be something of an international agreement, court deputies decided. The license, issued without the customary five-day waiting period, went to John A. Fraser, who came from British Guiana, South America, and Miss Ruby M. Booty, who listed her birthplace as Perth, Western Australia. On their applications, Fraser gave his present address as Mt. Vernon, and Miss Booty said she lived in Mansfield.

There will be at least one Mansfielder who will be definitely pro-Michigan when the Wolverines renew their football rivalry with Ohio State at Columbus in November. He is Joseph Blahnik, Montgomery-Ward manager. Back in 1922 and 1923, Blahnik was a tackle on the Michigan eleven and a teammate of the great Harry Kipke, and at this season of the year his mind naturally turns to football. He's figuring on seeing the annual Ohio-Michigan duel and there's no doubt he's a strong partisan of the Maize and Blue.

Several downtown workers were repaid for an early morning walk at 6:45 a. m. today when they saw a white robin on West Third street. The birds are rare, particularly in this part of the country. It was white all over, except dark markings on its wings and the tip of its head. Its consort, however, was an inconspicious, every-day robin with a red vest.

Capt. Jesse Schwab has a problem. Not long ago, Schwab, who heads the first shift of police, asked the Ohio Public Service linemen for several of those insulator pins that you see sticking out of the utility poles' crossarms. Last night they were delivered—but they were still firmly stuck in the heavy crossarm. Now Schwab has to figure out some way to get them out of the beam without damaging them.

CIO TEST DUE

Strength of Lewis, Martin to Come to Showdown.

DETROIT—(AP)—A test of power between CIO Chieftain John L. Lewis and President Homer Martin of the United Automobile workers approached a critical stage today in efforts to restore peace to the auto union.

Over the next three days, during sessions of the UAW's international executive board opening today, a denouement was expected in the fight between Lewis and Martin over methods of keeping harmony in the big CIO unit.

Lewis sent two of his lieutenants, Philip Murray and Sidney Hillman, to represent him at the board meetings. The board will receive Lewis' proposals for peace, including the suggested reinstatement of officers ousted in the "Communist purge."

TYDINGS TO WIN IN MARYLAND, CAPITAL OBSERVERS BELIEVE

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—The inside word in the capital today is that Maryland Democrats probably will renominate Sen. Millard E. Tydings, anti-New Dealer classed by President Roosevelt among the "conservative-reactionary" Democrats.

Prospects for the nomination of the New Deal candidate, Rep. David J. Lewis, lie principally upon a possible ground swell of reaction to Mr. Roosevelt's Labor day speech at Denton, Md., in which he endorsed his man, or upon last-minute organizational miracles by Postmaster General James A. Farley.

Lewis supporters, however, are moderately confident and there is a tendency among many disinterested observers to forecast a close race. The intimation that strategists are about reconciled to Lewis' defeat comes from a qualified and reliable source. There was no suggestion that the president, himself, had given up the battle.

The forecast of Tydings' renomination is based primarily on two factors of weakness in Lewis' campaign:

1. The enthusiasm and individual brilliance of many of his addresses have not offset lack of a hard-hitting, state-wide organization.

2. Rural Maryland antipathy to the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Renomination of Tydings would maintain the unbroken series of triumphs of those Democratic senators who opposed judiciary reorganization last year. Terms of nine of those men expired this year. Five of them, so far, have come up for renomination and each has won easily. The latest recruit to the happy company is Sen. Pat McCarran (D., Nev.) renominated yesterday over two avowed New Dealers.

The concert will bring to a close the sixth season of Sunday evening concerts presented at the park under the direction of Eugene Smart, and sponsored by the park association.

Fisherman Finds Corpse as Submarine Operator Opens New Search of Waters.

(By United Press)

LITTLE CURRENT, Ont.—The body of Daniel Dodge, 21-year-old heir to the Dodge motor car millions, was found floating in the north channel of Georgian bay today by Wesley Ryder, a fisherman.

Ryder, fishing from his tug, noticed the body floating just below the surface.

The body was found within a few yards of the place Dodge disappeared.

Dodge was on his honeymoon with his bride of two weeks, Loreen MacDonald Dodge, former Gore Bay telephone operator and daughter of a fishing tug captain.

He and three employes were injured in the dynamite blast, Dodge seriously.

Mrs. Dodge, aided by employes, placed her husband in his speedboat and set out for Little Current across the north channel. En route Dodge fell overboard.

The body was turned over to Alfred G. Wilson, Rochester, Mich., father-in-law of Dodge who has been directing the search since he arrived here Aug. 17.

FAIR ENOUGH!

Cotton Ed Just Beat His Opposition to Punch On 'White Supremacy' Issue

—By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK—Cotton Ed Smith, who has just received another mandate from the people of South Carolina, has been denounced for waving a bloody shirt in his recent successful campaign and reviving the issue of white supremacy in the south.

He is said to have delivered again an oratorical set-piece of his which is derisively known to his colleagues and the press gallery of the United States senate as "The Speech."

This oration is not so famous as some commentators apparently believe it is, but they go on an assumption that the public far and wide is familiar with it and give only an inkling as to its contents in saying that it deals with the horrors of the reconstruction era in the south and, in particular, with personal affront to a female relative of the senator in those terrible days.

It is difficult, however, to see how the issue on which Senator Smith made his campaign can be avoided in future battles within the Democratic party in the south.

* * *

For the Roosevelt wing of the party contains a strong element of politically adventurous northern visionaries and theorists who are determined to apply their beliefs evenly everywhere. In doing this, these New Dealers must, in consistency, raise the issue which Senator Smith used for reasons of political opportunism. He just beat the opposition to the punch.

The issue cannot be avoided in the deep south without a serious compromise of professed principle. And, if it be pressed out of respect for consistency and principle, and for the appeasement of the colored vote in the north, it will provoke a widespread revival of the reminiscences and feeling to which Senator Smith resorted in his fight.

* * *

Least consistent of those who rebuke Mr. Smith for raising this issue are the Communists and those journalistic fellow-travelers who weep over the tragedy of such a low appeal from the stump, knowing that they have forced the issue by nominating a colored man for the office of vice president on the Communist ticket.

Anyone with any realism or honesty knows that this was done as a gesture of extreme aggravation and taunt, and was directed at the white population of the southern states. It was intended to woo the colored everywhere, and to enrage the white south, and there was not the slightest notion that the candidacy of the colored running mate of Earl Browder should be taken seriously.

* * *

If, however, the Communists and their fellow travelers be taken literally in this, they should welcome rather than regret the acceptance of their deliberate challenge.

In that case, they plainly indicated a readiness not merely to meet but to force the issue, and the acceptance of the challenge by such as Cotton Ed Smith or anyone else in southern politics should inspire them to attack, not moan.

* * *

Cotton Ed is no great adornment to the senate, and his victory is a matter of little pride to those who would curb the development of a government by one man's will. Yet, he would have been entirely acceptable and would have been acclaimed as a progressive statesman of the south, like Pepper of Florida, if he had notified the White House in advance of a willingness to vote exactly as directed on all issues.

It takes no senator to do that, and it needn't cost $20,000 a year in pay, expenses and perquisites of the senatorial office to hire a dummy to perform the simple "yea" and "nay" duties of a man so committed. A page boy could do the job just as well.

Hollywood Speaks---

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—Since John (Jules) Garfield is one of the few real star "finds" of the year, a few further observations than those I made in a recent column should not be amiss:

His second picture (after "Four Daughters" in which he is successfully introduced) is "Blackwell's Island." He took the role of the crusading reporter because he liked the script—but in production the role became something else again. It is not the type he means when he speaks of his determination to do only "important" pictures.

In those "important" pictures he says he will be content to play any role no matter how unimportant—as long as it gives him a chance to act.

Despite his youth—he's 26 now—he was one of the most important factors in holding together New York's Group theater where the something-to-say plays of Clifford Odets, among others, were produced. Call him a 'Red' even in jest and he'll counter with "No, a Liberal."

One of the things he plans to do with his movie money—which is less than it could be because he demanded the right to go back to the stage when he pleases—is to produce "good plays I have faith in when no one else has."

* * *

He says he is a little sad at losing his name of Jules in the movies. He wouldn't accept the first explanation the name-changers made. They said Jules might sound too "French—too foreign." He said, "Come clean—it's because it sounds Semitic, isn't it?" They said "Yeah." It made him a "little sad."

You may not agree with his ideas but you have to admire his steadfast, shining idealism. He is no soap-box orator. He says "I believe in these things" and you know he does believe in those things. He is sincere—and it shows in his acting

His idol is Paul Muni—and on the screen he looks like a youthful composite of Muni, Edward G. Robinson, George Raft, better-looking than any of them but far from conventionally handsome.

* * *

John and Franchot Tone (both alumni of the Group) may be in a Group play together this next season. They've never met before. Tone came to Hollywood before Garfield went with the Group.

Garfield's devotion to Angelo Patri, the educator who "rescued" him—John is sure—from his Dead End environment and inclinations, is like that of a son to father. "I am proud to know him," John says.

His role in "Four Daughters" is that of a weakling. Garfield gives a strong performance of a weakling—so that you know every thought every impulse, every shading of the fellow's character.

His philosophy: "The only reason for living that I can see is to leave the world a better place, to try to make the lives of other people a little happier than when you came in."

He says he won't answer fan mail. He's too busy learning to act. (But maybe he'll learn that fan mail IS important.)

If he keeps on as he started—and he should—either "the Group" or Garfield is going to get rich. From what I've seen of him so far I'll say it's going to be "the Group."

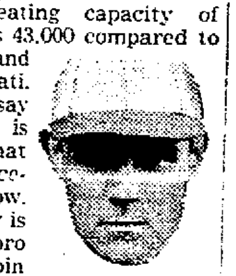
YANKEES PULL FOR PIRATES TO WIN PENNANT FOR FINANCIAL REASONS

By EDDIE BRIETZ

NEW YORK—(AP)—The Yanks are pulling for the Pirates because the seating capacity of Forbes field is 43,000 compared to 26000 at Redland field, Cincinnati. . . . They say Don Budge is typing out that "pro" announcement right now. . . . Broadway is backing the pro Giants to pin back the All-Stars' ears tonight. . . . Michigan State may rise up on its hind legs and give Fritz Crisler the wrong kind of welcome to Michigan in that football opener next month. . . . Jack Kearns has done a Dempsey and opened a bar in Detroit. . . . Well, it was nice to see Messrs. Quist and Bromwich again.



RAY BLADES

Hymie Caplin and his crew of tin ears are back from the coast . . . Record: ten fights; ten wins. . . . Babe Ruth still is the No. 1 baseball guy in Beantown . . . One of the papers up there is plugging a Ruth All-Star team contest with all the zip of the old days. . . . Here's another no-hitter for the Canadian-American league: Eddie Lauer, hurling the last game of the season for Ogdenburg (N. Y.) did a perfect job of it . . . He served to only 27 Ottawa batters (not one of them reached first), fanned seven, walk none and won, 7-0. . . . Now that the Giants are out of it, Cliff Melton, who flopped when the race was hot, is pitching like a house afire.

* * *

All that talk about Henry Armstrong not going to fight Ceferino Garcia here in November is so much apple sauce. . . . Rochester baseball writers already have lined up Ray Blades as their candidate to succeed Frankie Frisch if Frank gets the air from the Cardinals. . . . Lou Ambers has more than 20 offers to fight around the country and Pilot Al Weill will begin picking out the fat ones next week. . . . Old Casey Stengel may be a clown, but the other clubs see nothing funny about his ball team.

Sisler Named Head of Semi-Pro Baseball.

RAY Dumont sure pulled a winner out of the hat when he named George Sisler, the old first sacker, to be high commissioner of semi-pro baseball. . . . You simply can't count the coaches making passes at the U. C. L. A. coaching job. . . . Out at Nebraska they say Harry Hopp, a triple threater from Hastings, will be another Sam Francis before the season is over.

HANOVER THE GREAT COLLAPSES ON TRACK

INDIANAPOLIS —(INS)— Death cut short the career of Hanover the Great, racing thoroughbred, in the first heat of the Governor's stake trotting race at Indiana fairground here yesterday.

Driver Sep Palin pulled it up after lagging a quarter of a mile behind the field and Hanover collapsed. E. J. Baker of St. Charles, Ill., paid $6,000 for the horse, which was undefeated last year on half mile tracks.

Bierman Admits Gophers Will Be 'Pretty Good'

By TED PETERSON

MINNEAPOLIS —(AP)— It's a tough row to hoe with little prospect of a harvest of football championship at the University of Minnesota this fall, in the opinion of head coach Bernie Bierman.

Bierman has reverted to his usual early season pessimism in pondering an acknowledged hard eight-game schedule opening with the University of Washington, a Pacific coast conference favorite, here Sept. 24.

"A championship team? That's out," Bierman snapped emphatically today. But he did admit, "We'll have a pretty good, rugged team."

"Right now," Bierman said, "we fear Washington most, but they're all going to be awful tough."

Defending champions in the Western conference, the Gophers after opening against Washington Huskies entertain a strong Nebraska team Oct. 1, and play their first Big Ten engagement here against Purdue Oct. 8.

Only 10 days of practice will be behind for Minnesota before Washington's invasion after the start of drill next Saturday. This worries Bierman, since he believes his athletes will have to be brought to the peak of condition for the opening fray and kept that way for the remainder of the schedule.

Barring complications, Minnesota should enter the season with 20 lettermen and 16 of last year's reserves, augmented by a good force of sophomore talent.

The squad should be stronger at guard, center, and fullback, Bierman said and weaker at end, quarterback and halfback. The tackles will be on a par with a year ago, he believes. Harold Van Every, sophomore sparkplug of a year ago, again figures prominently in Bierman's scheme this fall. Van Every passes, punts, and is one of the team's most consistent ground gainers as a ball carrier.

Other veteran backs include Larry Buhler and Win Christianson, big, powerful fullbacks; George Faust, Wilbur Moore, and George Franck, halfbacks. There also are a few promising sophomores who may fill in nicely in the backfield department.

Three season centers are available. They are John Kulbitski, Dan Elmer, and Hilding Mattson, while Captain Francis Twedell and Horace Bell, point after touchdown kicker par excellence, form a stonewall guard combination.

Charles Schultz, Win Pederson, Bob Johnson, and Warren Kilbourne head the veteran returning tackles, while at ends, are John Mariucci, "Butch" Nash and Earl Ohlgren.

Bierman said he anticipates little change in his system of play which means he again will depend on a hard charging line, fast ball handling, mixed with plenty of deception.

After the Purdue game, Minnesota plays Michigan here October 15, Northwestern there October 29, Iowa here Nov. 5, Notre Dame there Nov. 12, and wind up against Wisconsin at Madison Nov. 19.

Redlegs Receive Acid Test

Cincy Can Cut Bucs' Lead to 2½ Games by Taking Series Starting Today.

By GEORGE KIRKSEY

NEW YORK—(U.P.)—Cincinnati's dream of becoming the first club in major league history to win the pennant after finishing in the cellar the year before, will receive the acid test in a two-game series opening today against the league-leading Pittsburgh Pirates.

In games today and tomorrow at Cincinnati the Reds will have a chance to prove that they are not clutching at a phantom pennant. Only 4½ games off the pace, the Reds can slash the Pirates' lead to 2½ games by sweeping the series. And if that should happen most baseball soothsayers agree that the second place Reds, and not the first place Pirates will be the club to beat in the dizzy National league race.

Bucs Can Halt Critics.

By the same token Pittsburgh can shout down its critics who say that the Pirates haven't the heart to stand off a real challenge in a hammer-and-tongs stretch battle.

The Reds' drive to catch the Pirates received a jolt yesterday when the St. Louis Cardinals put the screws on the Rhinelanders, 8-0. The Pirates were idle.

With one of their finishes reminiscent of happier days, the New York Giants prevented the Boston Bees from closing in on fourth place by scoring a 6-5 victory in 10 innings.

Vito Tamulis survived a four-run first inning to pitch Brooklyn to a 6-4 triumph over the Phillies. Tamulis allowed only three hits after the first frame.

Cecil Travis' single with the bases loaded in the eighth drove in the two runs by which Washington defeated the Boston Red Sox 7 to 5.

Monte Stratton scored his 14th victory by pitching the Chicago White Sox to an 8 to 2 triumph over the Browns.

Hank Trails Ruth.

By failing to get a homer since Aug. 31, Hank Greenberg, Detroit slugger, is now behind Babe Ruth's record-breaking schedule. Ruth hit three homers on Sept. 6 to make his total 47. Greenberg has 46, and needs 15 in 26 games to break Ruth's mark of 60.

Yesterday's hero — Alex Kampouris, Giants' utility infilder, who was shoved back into the lineup at second base and hit a homer and a game-winning single against the Bees.

RANDOM SHOTS

PETE LINSTER'S record as a tournament finalist is unmatched. Linster, who regained the Possum Run crown this week, has appeared in six club tournaments and won every one. His record includes three Coolridge and as many Possum Run titles. And, according to Pete, there's room on the Linster trophy mantel for additions . . . Case, Wooster, Marietta, Denison and Baldwin-Wallace are the teams to watch in the Ohio conference next fall, according to the dope. . . . Now that the Indians are again winning, it's about time somebody said something about next year's pennant possibilities. . . . WTAM, Cleveland, will broadcast all of the Ohio State grid tilts. . . . Foot-fault penalties called against Australia's Adrian Quist in the deciding Davis Cup match with Don Budge brings to mind the complaints Americans made against France a couple of years ago. French line judges were supposed to have been extremely valuable in the French cup defense. . . . In the east, Columbia and Yale are the grid clubs they're talking about. . . . Alabama's 1938 football prospects are so rosy many of the team's supporters are pinching themselves to see if it's true what they say about the Crimson Tide.

Fullager, Frisbee To Be Mound Foes In Finale Thursday

Jim Fullager and Ted Frisbee are expected to renew their pitching rivalry when the champion Johns park club engages the City Class A softball all-stars in the third and deciding game of a series at League park at 5:30 p. m. Thursday.

There was little to choose between the pitching of the two classy hill workers in the first two games, and the outcome of their duel Thursday will be watched with interest.

Frisbee turned back the hard-hitting Johnnies with eight hits to win the first game of the series Sunday by a 9 to 1 count, and Fullager was returned the victor by the same margin Labor day, yielding only seven safeties.

Lift Bowling Lid Thursday

Commercial League Teams Open at Meder Lanes.

The lid on the 1937-38 bowling season will be lifted at the Meder Recreation alleys at 7:30 p. m. Thursday when the Commercial B league swings into action.

The league consists of a dozen teams, with the prospects for a wide-open race encouraging, according to Secretary Roy Vaughn. The Uniet Insurance club, which won the title last year, will not be represented this season, but four members of the team will remain together to form the nucleus for the Satterlee Restaurant club. They are Ed Funston, Ed Henrich, Harold Geiger and Wayne Anthony.

Opening matches and alleys follow: Mansfield Athletic Supply vs. Shelby Cycle, alleys 1-2; Ringside Cafe vs. Burghardt Cafe, 3-4; Mansfield Rug & Linoleum vs. Richland Printers, 5-6; Heilman Grocery vs. Office Cafe, 7-8; Yuncker Sports vs. Metz Auto Supply, 9-10; Satterlee Restaurant vs. Ohio Public Service, 11-12.

ATLANTA —(U.P.)— A rookie, Woodrow Rich, pitched a no-hit, no-run game last night for Little Rock against the Atlanta Crackers, leaders of the Southern association.

Little Rock won 1-0 in the first game of a double-header as Rich, who won 12 and lost 15 for Clarksdale, Miss., of the Cotton States league, last year, proved himself invincible. It was his 18th victory of the season against nine defeats.

GREYHOUND SETS NEW INDIANA FAIR RECORD

INDIANAPOLIS —(U.P.)— There was a new mile trotting record for the Indiana state fair track today, but E. J. Baker's champion Greyhound missed by ¾ of a second breaking his own world record when he stepped around the oval in 1:56¾.

The performance followed the death of a stablemate, Hanover the Great. The latter collapsed and died in front of several thousand persons in the grandstand after finishing the first heat in the Governor's stake.

BRADY'S TEAM WINS PAIR

It was incorrectly reported to The News-Journal yesterday that the CIO softball team defeated Brady's All-Stars. The All-Stars won the game, 12 to 11, as well as the other half of the double bill in which they trimmed Hunt's All-Stars, 8 to 7.

Tygers Lack Experience, But Show Possibilities

Speed of Predecessor Also Missing as Murphy Pushes Club for Inaugural.

By OSCAR RUHL

COACH Russ Murphy has never predicted a winning season for a Mansfield high school football club, and the Tyger leader has not broken the precedent this season by coloring the prospects with optimism.

Faced by a schedule including such sturdy foes as Canton McKinley, Massillon and Sandusky, Murphy is as pessimistic as ever this late summer, and listening to him, it is difficult to see how the Tygers can actually win a ball game.

Not a Push-Over.

Of course, the outlook is not as encouraging as in the recent past, and Murphy probably has a right to sing the blues, but the team will not be a push-over for any man's ball club, you can feel assured of that.

It can't be denied that Mansfield faces one of the toughest schedules in history. Few of the foes listed on the cards can be regarded as set-ups, and it will take a good Tyger team to build a decent record.

While the prospects may appear dull today, a lot can happen before a week from next Saturday when the Tygers line up for their opening game with Akron West.

Inexperienced material has not made Murphy's job very easy these days. The squad appears to have the physical equipment for a winning ball club, but whether this can be utilized to the fullest extent because of inexperience remains to be seen.

Speed of previous Mansfield teams will be absent this year, it now appears. Murphy has a number of speedsters, but the club as a whole will lack the swiftness of the 1937 club.

Murphy has no idea as to how the club will line up for the inaugural. Capt. Rich Nagle, Al Schwaner, Dick McMullen and Red Lemunyon have produced the outstanding performances in the backfield so far during the conditioning drills, with the latter showing up particularly well.

One of the fastest backfield candidates, Lemunyon has a nice stride for ball carrying purposes, can catch passes and, generally speaking, conducts himself like a football player. His inexperience is his only handicap.

Ike Smith, Howard Hershey, Marshall Smith, Grover Swoyer and Ted Bush cannot be disregarded in Murphy's backfield plans, but several of these have lost ground in fights for first-string berths by irregular attendance at drills.

Linemen Stand Out.

Among the linemen who have stood out in drills are Harold Gallagher, Dick White and Dick Sauder, centers; Ed Goettle, Bob Guegold, Harold Williams, Jack Phaler and Bob Murray, guards; Joe Lehr, Foster Dials, Jack Swartz and Russ Beer, tackles; Mike Horvath, Jack Dugger, Bill Russell and Bob Brandenburg, ends.

With classes getting under way today, the schedule of practice sessions was shifted from morning to afternoon.

BASEBALL HALL OF FAME ADDS TWO NEW NAMES

NEW YORK—(U.P.)—Two more names have been added to the baseball hall of fame at Cooperstown, N. Y., it was announced today. They are Alexander J. Cartwright, organized of the first baseball club in America, and Henry Chadwick, creator of the first system of scoring games and recording the results.

Ohio State Not the Team to Beat, Says Schmidt

By RUSSELL FULLER

COLUMBUS — (INS) — Francis Schmidt, the big Texan who razzle-dazzled the midwest and east dizzy, shuffled his 1938 football deck today preparatory to dealing out opening instructions Saturday to 46 young acorns who with proper care and feeding ought to grow into full-fledged buckeyes.

Unfortunately, the Bucks seem to be national champions before they even toss that first football. Reports from most every other section of the country say that Ohio State is the team to beat. Reports from this section of the country say that Ohio State is the team that can be beat.

Ever since the underground chorus started its annual "beat Ohio State" crescendo, Schmidt has been trying to impress everyone including his prospective gridders, with the idea that "we are going to have just a fair outfit around here this year." He is right.

The picture as the first day of practice nears is not one of blue ribbon quality. In the first place, Schmidt himself has admitted the guard spots are going to be spotty. Indiana and Southern California power plays would verily "go to town" through inferior guard material.

The scene can change from one of discouragement to a pleasing portrayal if fellows like Victor Marion, Bill Nosker, Charlie Gales and Nick Rutkay, all guards, can drink the elusive elixir of latent power and soothe a pressing worry.

The end situation which for awhile indicated a weakness has taken on a fairly pleasing aspect of its own. Alex Schoenbaum and Co-Captain Carl Kaplanoff will probably hold down first string berths at tackle throughout the practice and regular season.

Schmidt has indicated he would like to use "Sandusky" Charlie Maag, the husky sophomore, at the center post. That is just where Maag will be if he displays in practice the power and precision which manifested itself in his freshman year.

Power and speed as aired and timed by Forrest Fordham and Johnny Rabb will unquestionably give Schmidt one of the best fullback spots in the Big Ten conference. The two will alternate there.

The sophomore flash, Don Scott of Canton, can secure a first and second mortgage on the quarterback job by showing up well in preliminary trials. Scott should be Ohio's candidate for the outstanding sophomore of the year.

Harder to Attempt To Stretch Streak

Seeks 15th Triumph to Run Indians' String to Nine Games.

DETROIT — (U.P.) — The veteran Mel Harder went to the hill for the Cleveland Indians against Detroit today, seeking his 15th victory of the season, as the Tribe found itself tied for second-place and in the throes of an eight game winning streak.

Young Bob Feller, the kid pitcher who has "come back" with the Indians during the past three weeks, shut out the slugging Detroit Tigers with four hits Tuesday and won, 6 to 0. Feller struck out six in chalking up his 14th win this year to tie with Harder and Johnny Allen in number of victories.

Climb Into Tie.

Since the Boston Red Sox stumbled before the Washington Senators, 7 to 5, the triumph enabled the Tribe to climb into a tie with Boston for second place—14 games behind the mighty Yankees whom the Vittmen led for the early two-thirds of the pennant race.

Feller gave up walks to the first two men to face him and two more before the first three innings were gone but after that he was invincible, even silencing the slugging bats of Hank Greenberg and Rudy York. Hankus-Pankus collected a single, one of the Tigers' four blows.

The Indians' own attack was slow to get in stride but they ended the day with 10 blows off Harry Eisenstat, often a Tribal jinx. Roy Weatherly, Jeff Heath, Rollie Hemsley, Hal Trosky and Feller himself each numbered two hits for the day.

Ken Keltner, sensational rookie third baseman for Cleveland, missed his first game of the season. He sat on the bench with a blistered foot while John Kroner took his place in the field.

Red Birds Cop League Title

Win Mid-Atlantic Toga by Half Game Margin.

PORTSMOUTH — (AP) — Portsmouth won the 1938 Mid-Atlantic league pennant last night by half a game over Canton in a stretch drive similar to the 1937 flag race which the Terriers took by the same margin.

The Red Birds flitted past Canton with a Labor Day double-header victory and clinched the pennant with a 12 to 3 conquest of fourth-place Akron last night. Canton which took the league lead from Erie June 19, had clung to it until Monday with the exception of July 13 when the Birds ascended to the heights for one day.

In other contests which wound up the season Canton blanked fifth-place Charlestown, 6-0; seventh-place Erie trounced sixth-place Dayton, 15-2, and third-place Springfield whipped last-place Johnstown, 8-3.

This year's title was worth $700 to 15 Portsmouth players who will share in the purse. Canton team members will split $300.

The Shaughnessy playoff gets under way Thursday with Portsmouth pitted against invading Springfield and Akron meeting Canton in the latter city.

Returns Expense Check To Mrs. Helen Moody.

NEW YORK—(U.P.)—The U. S. Lawn Tennis association in a magnanimous gesture today returned to Mrs. Helen Wills Moody a check for $1,309.45 which represented the Californian's expenses while a member of the U. S. Wightman Cup team competing in Europe.

Mrs. Moody had sent the association her check for that amount with a letter of withdrawal from the national tennis championships two weeks ago. Mrs. Moody explained that because of an attack of neuritis she was physically unable to keep her promise to play in the nationals and that she hoped her check would be accepted.

The circuit clouters were Simpson, Switzer and Dillon of No. 6 and Burdine and Smith of No. 1. Crofutt, however, led the winners at the plate with four singles in as many trips to the plate.

INTRODUCTORY OFFER

50c Allowance

On Your Old Tubes When You Buy Sears New Safety Tube!

The "Fleet-test" proves it's America's safest tube! Two tubes were put into tires that had already seen miles of tortuous service—then four nails were driven into each. Down the highways at breath-taking speeds — dangerous curves—sudden stops—good roads and bad. At five hundred miles the Safety Tubes were checked. In spite of the nails they showed a loss of only 18% of air pressure! Make your car SAFE—buy a set today!

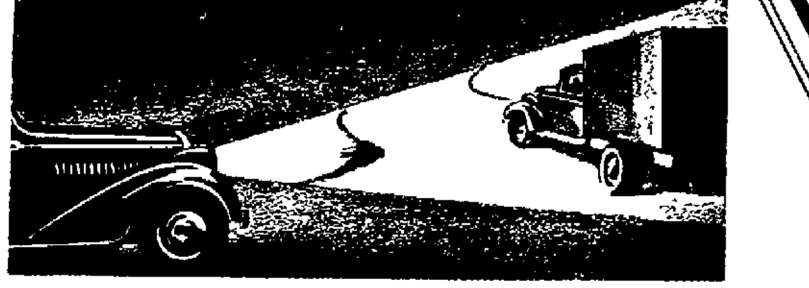
Your Safety at Night



DEPENDS On Your LIGHTS

Investigation of automobile accidents by safety organizations shows that accidents during the hours of darkness are more serious than those occurring in the daytime. This is due to the fact that cars at night are driven too fast for the range of visibility afforded by improperly adjusted headlamps

Don't drive your car with lights that are not properly adjusted. We use the GUIDE HEADLAMP TESTER. It has state and municipal approval and is used by many new car manufacturers

Drive in and let us restore your lights to their original efficiency.

CRIPPLES of the HIGHWAYS

It is known from tests made of the mechanical condition of 3,200,000 cars in a number of states that 3 out of every 4 vehicles registered are dangerous because of some defect in SAFETY equipment.

SERIOUS DEFECTS NOTED IN CARS:

Brakes 34%
Tires 48%
Lamps 69%

No person should permit the figures in the table above to lead them into the fallacy that mechanically defective cars are relatively unimportant as a contributing factor in the occurrence of automobile accidents.

LIGHT BUYING FAILS TO LIFT DULL EXCHANGE

Market Awaits Solution to Germany Minority Issue in Czechoslovakia.

NEW YORK—(AP)—A few small buying ripples kept the stock market today from coming to a complete rest.

Dealings were so small, minor buying orders were sufficient to lift many issues for gains ranging to more than a point. But as the fourth hour approached, the market generally retained the air of repose it has held for some days while world money centers waited in suspense for the solution to the German minority issue in Czechoslovakia.

Fear the massing of troops along the German-French border might point to a nearby climax in European affairs kept financial quarters in a mood of uneasy waiting.

Favored in the cautious buying were U. S. Rubber, Montgomery Ward, Kennecott, Philip Morris, Chrysler, General Motors and Electric Autolite.

A little lower most of the time were Air Reduction, National Cash Register, New York Central, Anaconda and Consolidated Edison.

Utilities, including Electric Bond and Share and American Gas, sagged as competition of public-owned power projects was spotlighted by the offer of a Texas subsidiary of Electric Bond and Share to sell its properties to the lower Colorado river authority.

Wall Streeters who had been hopeful of increased activity in speculative markets after Labor day, theoretically the termination of the vacation season for financial quarters, were disappointed as trading showed hardly a flicker of life at the opening.

Business observers were on the alert for evidence of autumn stimulus to industrial activity, although normally the full effect of the season expansion is not felt until October.

that negotiation to end the deadlock.

At Nurnberg, Hitler told Germany's conscript labor army that its spades, "being wielded in the east, north and south, but especially in the west—on France's borders—were playing a vital part in defense of the reich."

Referred to France.

His speech was the climax of the annual labor rally at Zeppelin field, main event of the third day of the annual Nazi party congress.

Most of his audience interpreted his reference to the work of labor battalions "especially in the west" as a public admission that they have been perfecting Germany's fortifications facing France. Many considered it an indirect reply to France's calling of reserves into her Maginot line.

In addition to placing Marseille under military control, the French war ministry notified reservists—the number not determined—to report immediately for duty in the Maginot zone where they finished their regular two-year military service only three weeks ago. More than three times the normal garrison of 100,000 men already were concentrated along the border.

Both France and Germany clamped a rigorous anti-espionage campaign on top of their military operations along the border, carefully watching all travelers.

Sudeten Leader Gets Czechs' 'Last Offer.'

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia,—(U.P.)—Premier Milan Hodza today handed the government's "last word" minority plan to Ernst Kundt, Sudeten German party leader. An explanatory note accompanied the plan.

It was said authoritatively that the plan was designed to make the Sudeten party's own demands an acceptable basis for negotiations.

It was asserted that the government offer accepted all of the demands either wholly or in part, and was regarded as being the maximum possible without endangering the country's territorial integrity.

But Sudeten German leaders asserted that the government must accept their demands in full.

Usually reliable informants said that the new government plans accepted demands number 1, 5, 6, and 7 of the so-called "Carlsbad" demands of the Sudeten Germans. These are: (1) Full equality of Germans with Czechs; (5) Specific guarantees for those Germans who live outside the Sudeten German area in Czechoslovakia; (6) Removal of all "injustices" suffered by Sudeten Germans and reparations for them; (6) Germans to be employed in state posts in German areas.

GAS BILL OK'D ON 3RD READING

But Shelby Council Defers Final Passage of Rate Measure to Sept. 19.

Roethlisberger, who voted for the ordinance on the first two readings, asked Swanger:

"Would you back a rate, with your name on it, if it might go to the utilities commission (in Columbus) for settlement, and cost the city money for litigation?"

Swanger replied that with the federal power commission now empowered to investigate interstate gas rates, the question might never go to the commission.

Councilman C. E. Morris put the motion for the third reading, and it passed, 3-1, with Roethlisberger absent. At Swanger's request, however, action on final passage was deferred until Sept. 19. Swanger said he still had hopes he could convert enough councilmen to defeat the measure.

SWING MUSIC IN PLANTS? SURE!

Psychologist Says It Improves Efficiency of Workers and Bolsters Their Morale.

Goodman's hottest numbers were played for the boys in your foundry. And (this is for Mr. Draffan) how do you think Wayne King's soothing melodies would work in the casting grinding department?

At some of the other plants, there would be slightly different problems, of course, but if you're going to take their idea at all seriously (or are you?) you'll probably be able to work out the details.

* * *

Want to hear some more about what Mr. Humes discovered?

He found, for instance that it doesn't make a great deal of difference what kind of music you play. It can be fast or slow. In fact, he tried a lot of different kinds—more kinds than we knew there were, in fact.

And the results were about the same. The workers were more efficient when the music was playing than when it wasn't. Slow music, he found, worked just as well as fast music.

He asked the workers "How does music help you?" And they answered "Keeps you from feeling tired." "Makes the time go faster." "Keeps you in good spirits."

So there you have it.

Mr. Humes didn't say that there was a possibility of a worker getting so enthused by some hot swing that he would take time off from his task to do a little trucking, or whatever they call it. Of course, that might impair efficiency somewhat.

Anyway, gentlemen, if you do try out this idea, let us know about it, will you?

CHINESE PLANE FALLS IN FIGHT WITH JAP CRAFT

Nippon Believes High Army Officials Were on Ship But China Denies It.

(By International News Service)

SHANGHAI—Japanese military aircraft shot down another Sino-German Eurasia plane 30 miles southwest of Hankow yesterday, according to an official Japanese army announcement today.

A Nipponese communique from Nanking said the large passenger plane brought down by Japanese bullets was No. 17 of the Eurasia fleet.

It added that Chinese silence regarding the attack was believed to indicate that high Chinese officials were aboard the craft.

Later, however, an announcement from Hankow, provisional Chinese capital, stated the plane carried no passengers, and that only the pilot was aboard the plane when it was attacked.

Five Japanese pursuit planes brought the passenger craft to earth, it was stated.

No Signs Of Life.

A few hours after the attack, a Chinese National Aviation Corporation flying boat sighted the wreck of the Eurasia air liner southwest of Hankow. It reported no signs of life were visible near the wreckage.

Beyond announcing that the plane carried no passengers, the Chinese communications ministry at Hankow maintained silence regarding the incident, which marked the second Japanese assault on a Eurasia craft.

On Monday Japanese pursuit planes fired on and forced down a Eurasia air liner soon after it had taken off from Hong Kong. Passengers and members of the crew were unharmed.

On Aug. 24 a China National Aviation Corp. air liner was shot down near Macao, with a reported loss of at least 15 lives.

'FLIVVER PLANE' FINISHES FLIGHT

Flies 4½ Days on Endurance Record Quest.

SYRACUSE, N. Y—(AP)—A yellow flivver plane that flew nearly four days and a half without stopping was pulled from Onondaga lake today after it had carried Merrill Phoenix and Harold Allen to a new endurance mark for small craft.

In making a forced landing on the lake, the plane drifted low, Phoenix said, while he was changing a sparkplug and blocked the view of Allen who was at the controls. He said they were unable to gain altitude and hit the lake with the throttle wide open.

The fliers said their mark of 103 hours, 6 minutes and 10 seconds would stand.

CITY HOST TO 300 PHYSICIANS

First of Series of Regional Post Graduate Lectures Set for Tonight.

Mansfield will be host tonight to about 300 physicians from 13 north central Ohio counties who will be here to attend the opening of the Ohio State Medical association's regional post-graduate lecture course at the Mansfield-Leland hotel.

Speakers at the session, opening at 7:30, will be Dr. Roy W. Scott and Dr. Clyde L. Cummer, both of Cleveland. Dr. Scott will lecture on "Clinical Aspects of Arteriosclerosis," and Dr. Cummer's topic will be "Treatment of Early Syphilis."

The meeting is the first of a series of eight which will be held here during the fall months. The course was designed to bring the latest in medical and scientific developments to physicians.

Arrangements for the meetings are in charge of a committee headed by Dr. Mabel Emery of Mansfield, assisted by Dr. Lloyd Bonar and Dr. Howard B. Peck.

DRAWS $25 FINE

MILLERSBURG — Wilmer Gilbert, 24, Big Prairie, was fined $25 and costs here in Justice Wayne Stilwell's court on a charge of petit larceny, after he pleaded guilty to the theft of wheat from the farm of Lloyd Baker, west of here.

Gilbert was released on condition that he work for Baker until he has reimbursed him for the value of the wheat, set at $6.30, and has paid his fine and costs.

SEES SPECIAL ASSEMBLY CALL IN NOVEMBER

Director of Education Sure Davey Will Act to Help Ohio Schools.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS — State Education Director E. N. Dietrich, saying he hoped to have a conference soon with Governor Davey, stated today he had "every confidence" the governor will call a special session of the legislature after the November election to consider measures for improving the financial condition of the school foundation program.

Dietrich warned that unless the special session is held and steps taken to reduce the deficit in school finances and to re-enact the cigaret and liquor fuel taxes, two of those which support the program, many schools would be forced to close.

"The governor has said he will call the session and he has never said anything to the contrary," Dietrich said. "I have every confidence that he will stand by his promise."

No Interview Granted.

The governor announced early this summer that he would call a November school session but has not commented on it since. Dietrich, it was understood, on previous occasions has tentatively arranged to discuss the matter with the governor but has not yet succeeded in obtaining an interview.

The school foundation system is now running a $17,000,000 deficit, which state officials have estimated cannot be reduced below $12,000,000 by the end of the year.

Dr. David Sutton, director of school finance, has said that unless the taxes were re-enacted in a fall session he would prohibit school districts from borrowing in lieu of cash distributions at the quarterly late November settlement.

Dietrich announced that the department probably would reply later today to a chamber of commerce study reflecting educational cost trends in Ohio for the past five years. Officials indicated disagreement with the chamber's findings.

MEET SUNDAY

MILLERSBURG — The yearly meeting of the Churches of Christ of Holmes county will be held at the Welcome Church of Christ, southwest of here, Sunday, Sept. 11. It will be an all-day meeting with Bible school at 10:00 and preaching service at 11:00 a. m. and 2 p. m. Rev. J. F. Allison will be the presiding minister.

The meeting this year promises to be one of unusual interest. The speaker for the occasion is Dr. Alonzo Williard Fortune, pastor of the Central Christian church of Lexington, Ky. Dr. Fortune, who was born and reared on a farm in the southern part of Holmes county, served as pastor of the Christian church at Chagrin Falls, the First Christian church in Rochester, N. Y., and the Walnut Hills Christian church in Cincinnati, previous to his charge at the Lexing. Ky., church. He is also the author of three books.

Brumbaugh (above), director of the Wesley Foundation in Japan as their speaker. Butterfield will be program chairman of the meeting.

GALION BOARD ACTS TO RAZE OLD BUILDING

School Officials Get Ready for Erecting New School; Teachers Named.

GALION—Matters relative to the beginning of a new school year and also steps toward the building of a new East school, confronted the Galion Board of Education at its September meeting Tuesday night.

A special meeting of the board was held this afternoon for the purpose of considering a contract for tearing down the old East school structure. William Unger of Bucyrus, architect, and A. O'Neill, a district PWA offical, were present at last night's meeting to discuss the proposition of tearing down the old building.

The appointment of Virginia Sydenstricker of Blanchester, O., as physical education teacher for girls was approved. For the past three years she has taught at Wayne, W. Va.

Seek Tax Advance.

Bills approved for payment amounted to $1,740.47. It was necessary for the board to make a motion to ask for advance draws from the county auditor in the amounts of $15,000 for the general fund, and $12,000 for the bond and coupon account.

During a discussion of teachers' salaries it was reported that the total of salaries for the school year 1938-39 is $76,270.

Enrollment for the first day of school, Tuesday, was 1684. This compared with 1632 at the end of the first month last year. It is expected that the enrollment will reach 1700. There are 130 seniors registered this year.

CHAPTER 35

"Perhaps," Julian came back in a voice as nonchalant as her own. Then he said unexpectedly, dropping the oars again and letting the boat drift, "There's plenty of room on this seat for two."

"Oh, but I'm so very shy—don't you remember?" she teased.

"But there isn't room enough where you're sitting for both of us," Julian went on.

"No, there really isn't," Noel agreed demurely.

"Then it stands to reason that you should come down here and sit beside me. If I moved up there, the boat would very likely capsize."

"Well, to save us both from a watery grave—" Noel moved carefully until she found herself beside him. "Now, you stick to your rowing," she said with a husky laugh.

But Julian's arm already was around her. "I made a solemn vow that you'd go back to town completely and thoroughly unkissed," he said, and added, "but you see how it is. You're absolutely the most tantalizing, the most tempting, the stubbornest and most irresistible girl I ever knew." With that, he put his lips against hers, and kissed her with an almost savage and hungry passion.

It was a long, long kiss.

* * *

When Julian released her at last, his eyes were serious. "What am I going to do about you, Noel?"

"The answer is really quite simple," she said demurely.

Julian shook his head. "There isn't any answer," he said in a voice that was almost bitter. And added, "There never will be."

* * *

On the way back to town after that long kiss in the rowboat, Julian said, his voice not quite steady, "Let's try to talk this thing over sensibly, my dear."

Noel silently agreed.

"A marriage between us," Julian began, "would be doomed from the beginning. As I said before, you'd want to play while I have to work. Also, Noel, I never expect to make much money."

"You wouldn't need too—" Noel began, and in that very minute knew she had said the wrong thing.

For right away Julian said, "You certainly couldn't believe for one minute that I'd use—yours?"

"No, Julian, of course not," she hurried to say and then stopped. After that, she didn't know how to go on. She couldn't see any reason in the world why Julian shouldn't use her money if they were married. But she knew she wouldn't dare let him know she felt this way.

"After all, Julian," she began again at last, "isn't this whole argument just a matter of silly pride on your part?"

"If it should be," Julian said slowly, "then the obstacles between us might easily be removed. But it's so much more vital than that. I dislike almost every kind of social diversion, abhor bridge, like dancing sometimes, not often, and I'd certainly hate trotting about Europe with an entourage of maids and valets and a couple of Pekinese—"

"Now you're being ridiculous," Noel said with reproach.

"I suppose I am," Julian smiled.

"But the point is," he went on after a pause, "you can't hitch a butterfly to a plow. I know that comparisons are idious, and this one is particularly so, perhaps," he smiled, "but the situation is something like that. We couldn't adjust our two worlds and strike a happy medium between them."

"But we're both human beings possessed of average intelligence," Noel smiled.

* * *

Julian, however, did not return her smile. "I had a friend a year or two older than myself," he resumed, "who made the mistake of marrying a society woman. He was a doctor and on the way to making a brilliant record among the same class of people who come to me, the 'little people' as they are sometimes called. But what happened after his marriage?" He did not wait for an answer, but went on, "It wasn't long before he was forced to make a choice between going on with the really great work he was doing and that of becoming a 'society doctor,' attending teas and functions because of his wife's demands, making calls on the pampered wives of the rich, patting their hands, prescribing pretty pink pills for their overnourished stomachs and affecting a graceful bedside manner."

"Julian — really!" Noel began protesting, but he ignored her voice. "You couldn't blame the poor chap, either," he continued. "He faced a cruel choice, for there was a boy, a handsome manly little fellow. He would have lost not only his wife, but this son, for his wife threatened to divorce him unless he gave up his practice in the slums, as it seemed to her. So he became a 'society doctor'." Julian's voice was tinged with contempt. "I never expect to face a choice like that," he finished abruptly.

Noel was strangely silent after that. There seemed to be so little left to say. Or else it was because there was really a lot to be said, but she could not find the words.

And then Julian was stopping the car before the shabby Court street house. "So you really have stuck it out here. I'll have to admit, Noel, that you have more grit than I thought."

That word grit — it had a strange, earthy satisfying sound, even after everything Julian had said.

Then Noel heard herself saying, her voice a little shaky, "Suppose I told you that I'm leaving tomorrow—going to Hollywood?"

"To Hollywood? Just to be going?"

She shook her head. "In a professional capacity. A dancer."

"That's what you like most, isn't it?" Julian's voice was low.

"No, it just seems to be my one accomplishment," she said lightly. Then asked, "What do you think?"

"If you really want my opinion," Julian began, "I'd much rather see you go back to your bridge-playing, cocktail crowd."

He sat there for a moment in silence. Then his voice came again with an undernote of bitterness. "When one diversion grows stale, I suppose you must seek others. Hollywood is no better or worse than any other place. But naturally, it will be more thrilling."

"And, of course, it doesn't really matter to you where I am," she said, her voice breaking slightly.

Julian did not answer. Noel broke the silence by saying in a voice still not quite steady, "You once said that a girl like myself should belong to a man's lighter moments. But as for me—I want a securer place. That is, I—" but she stopped self-consciously.

Julian was still silent. At last he said, his voice poignant with feeling. "If I said that, I was very wrong. For I have found that our few hours together snatched in between my hours of work, give me a new inspiration to—carry on. A doctor always has his moods of discouragement, people being what they are, mulish and stubborn, often stupid and ignorant, but withal, gallant and brave as an army marching to a martial air. You help me, Noel," added.

Strange contradictory man. Noel leaned a little nearer. "If that is true, isn't it proof that we should be friends—at least?"

"Yes, friends, always," Julian murmured.

* * *

She lifted her head then and her face was so near that Julian bent and kissed her delicately. There was none of the fire and the flame of his kiss on the river. He had himself well in hand.

"Good night, my dear," he said, "and since we've reached the understanding at least that we're to be friends, you'll let me see you again? I'm a very selfish man, I'm afraid."

"Yes soon," she said in a happy whisper and went into the house.

Laurie was awake, and her brown eyes were round with excitement. "Chris phoned and said everything was fine. That you're to get ready to start to Hollywood."

Noel sank into the hard wooden rocker. "I can't go. I can't. They'll have to take the other girl. She'll probably be a hundred times better than I should anyway."

"It's Doctor Paige, isn't it?" Laurie asked.

"Yes, angel, it is," Noel said exultantly. "Tonight is one of the times I'm convinced Julian loves me. Tomorrow or next day I'll know better—but just for tonight I'm letting myself dream."

"He does love you, Noel," Laurie said confidently.

For the first time Noel looked directly into her face. Then she exclaimed, "What's the matter? You've been crying!" She went over and sat on the bed beside Laurie and put her arm around her, lifting her chin up with her finger. "Tell me," she urged.

"It's Pete," Laurie said in a stifled voice. "He's in love with me."

"Pete?" Noel echoed mystified. "Who on earth is he? And why should you care if he is in love with you? You're in love with Jimmy."

"I'm not—I mean, I'm—getting over it," Laurie contradicted.

"Who is this Pete?" Noel asked again.

"Pete Cointepas. He owns the De Luxe, don't you remember?"

"Oh, of course," Noel did remember the rather rotund, youngish-old man she had seen so many times bustling importantly about the cafe.

When Is a Scheme 'Fantastic'?

CALIFORNIA has again come to the front by nominating for the United States senate a man who favors a pension plan that provides payment of $30 a week to all unemployed persons above 50 years of age.

Sheridan Downey, who defeated Senator McAdoo for the Democratic nomination, is also an ardent New Dealer and supporter of Roosevelt policies, although the President expressed preference for Mr. McAdoo in advance of the California primaries last week.

It is estimated that more than a million California residents are over the 50-year mark and that it would take almost two billion dollars a year to pay each of them $30 a week.

In a recent address on the Social Security Act President Roosevelt urged that "we not allow ourselves to be misled by those who advocate short cuts to Utopia or fantastic financial schemes."

Yet how is the average person, unschooled in economics—or even in arithmetic—to differentiate between the "fantastic financial schemes" of the New Deal and the "fantastic financial schemes" of unscrupulous politicians, mercenary promoters and honest but deluded followers of visionary plans to assure livelihood without work?

The $30 a week pension plan is to be voted on in California in November. Steps have already been taken to organize the movement for action in other states. Meanwhile, adherents of the Townsend plan, which proposes payment of $200 a month to persons above 60 years of age, have been active in supporting congressional or senatorial candidates whose only claim to competence is their pledge to support the Townsend plan, which, it is estimated, would require about ten billion dollars a year to operate.

Carried to an easily imaginable extreme, with pensions for parents, and for children until they reach maturity, also making provision for all unemployed persons above 40, instead of 50, it seems entirely clear that an impossible burden would be placed upon a few million actual workers in attempting to provide for many million non-producers.

President Roosevelt and his New Deal associates have bid billions of dollars of taxpayers' money for support of fantastic schemes that have piled up a mountain of indebtedness, which, if continued, would lead to national bankruptcy.

They have no quarrel with the deluded Californians whose scheme is only slightly more fantastic. It was merely a case of overbidding—with promises that cannot be kept.

Deaths on Ohio Highways.

THERE is no reason to feel surprised, or shocked, by the fact that Ohio stood high among all states in the number of traffic fatalities over the Labor day period of crowded highways.

Observing the vast amount of reckless and incompetent driving done in this vicinity the wonder is that more were not killed and injured.

Ohio continues notorious in its laxity of traffic law enforcement and in the leniency of its drivers' license requirements.

Neighboring states, notably Pennsylvania, have developed license and car inspection laws, and established enforcement to such extent that highway safety has been greatly increased and consequent reduction in fatalities and lesser crashes has been accomplished.

While Ohio's loose handling of the liquor business has probably been responsible for the prevalence of drunken driving between midnight and morning, fault also lies with the state legislature in failing to strengthen the present driver's license law, so as to withhold driving privileges from habitual drunkards and from persons mentally or physically unfitted for such responsibility.

Stricter enforcement of traffic regulations, on city streets and on the highways, is also essential to greater safety. Spasmodic enforcement crusades accomplish little, as compared with a consistently maintained policy of day after day enforcement, without show of favoritism.

Lure of the Air Races.

STEADY progress in the field of aviation is evidenced by the opportunity for year-to-year comparisons at the Cleveland air races, which were more successful this year than ever before, with nation-wide interest shown in the several special events.

While such races provide the spectacular phase of man's conquest of the air, the fact remains that aerial navigation is constantly gaining in public acceptance and must be dealt with along practical lines, rather than as a passing novelty.

In Mansfield an increasing number of young men are becoming interested in flying and there are now more privately owned planes here than there were automobiles thirty years ago.

Delays in completion of Mansfield airport have resulted in failure of this city to profit from its advantageous location on east-west and north-south airlanes.

When it is realized by more people that airport facilities will be among Mansfield's necessities in the future, there will be more insistent demand for speedier action.

Seizure Is Confiscation.

SEIZURE of land and oil wells by the Mexican government without provision for "effective payment" is, as Secretary Hull says in his last note to Mexico, "unadulterated confiscation."

The practical situation is modified somewhat by the knowledge that various American interests in past years have been pretty free-handed in dealing with Mexican property. But that was done by private citizens, not by our government. Moreover, such practices have stopped.

Watching Trends

(Appearing as guest columnist for Preston Grover, Senator Byrd today tells of the economy in government movement. Yesterday Secretary Ickes explained the government's spending program.)

By HARRY F. BYRD
U. S. Senator from Virginia

WASHINGTON—The people of the United States owe billions of dollars on a debt that is going to be hard to pay. That is the debt of the federal government which, including contingent liabilities, by the end of this fiscal year will amount to a billion dollars or more for every state in the union. It is a debt that has got to be paid if the government is to survive.

Fiscal experts again are discussing increasing taxes. Various schemes of taxation have failed to produce sufficient revenue to finance excessive spending programs. New and heavily increased taxation must be enacted to pay the stupendous cost of government and the interest on the greatest debt in our history.

The only alternative to increasing taxes at great rates is reducing the cost of government. But to date none of the administration leaders has mentioned reduction of governmental costs as a means toward the end of balancing the federal budget and meeting debt obligations.

* * *

'Proper' Reorganization.

IT CANNOT be expected that reorganization of the federal government could be made to bring into balance excessive expenditures and insufficient revenue. But a very definite and tangible asset to federal taxpayers and prospective new taxpayers might be made the result of proper reorganization within the bounds of tried fundamental principles for economy and efficiency, for elimination of wastefulness and extravagance activity and expenditures, for abolition of useless and overlapping agencies and functions.

The current admission by our leaders that increased taxation is contemplated is sufficient reason for immediate reorganization for economy and efficiency, even if there were not others equally imperative and equally obvious to all who take the trouble to look about themselves.

The distressing thing about federal government reorganization is that it is not in progress at the moment—for economy and efficiency. It might easily have been if those who took the initiative in the reorganization proposals of last year had made economy and efficiency, beneficial to citizens and taxpayers, an objective of the program. But they did not.

Therefore, we who sought reorganization for the benefit of those who pay the bills as well as those who spend the money were forced to fight the proposals in order that reorganization for economy and efficiency might have a chance to live and be eventually enacted.

* * *

A Program.

THE fight was successful and, although delayed, the advocates of reorganization with emphasis on economy and efficiency are looking forward to an opportunity to support a reorganization program which has for its purpose a fearless and thoroughgoing reorganization of the federal government that will reduce the number of agencies now nearly twice as numerous as they were five years ago without impairing necessary functions and objectives: that would apply the brakes to the record breaking debt; that would deter the upward trend of taxes; that would expedite and simplify dealing with government agencies; that would strengthen independent accounting and auditing of government fiscal affairs; that would preserve the independence of the three branches of the government; that would facilitate relief for those who need it.

The constructive approach to government reorganization is toward the dual objective of economy and efficiency. The sum of these is simplification.

Such a reorganization program with the definite objectives of economy, efficiency and simplification I believe would be quickly enacted, and this much needed legislation no longer delayed.

Timely Editorial

What War Does.

Gold is where you find it, in the countries that must have gold to carry on their foreign aggressions. In Italy, during the raid on Ethiopia, wives tossed their wedding rings into pots set up in public squares to enlist contributions of the patriotic. Tokyo may go farther.

Alumni of the National College of Dentistry in Tokyo suggest to the government that a dentist be assigned each crematorium to remove gold fillings, plates, crowns and teeth from the recently departed. It is reckoned that 10 million yen which comes to $2,900,000—is going out of circulation yearly into graves and cremation urns. Such a sum is not to be despised in time of stress. Put to war purposes, it would have the advantage of insuring further dead, and these no doubt would yield an additional store of the necessary metal. Thus a war could be carried on in perpetuity, or so it would seem in the light of the new arithmetic which like the new morality of our international terrorists, stops at nothing.—Detroit News.

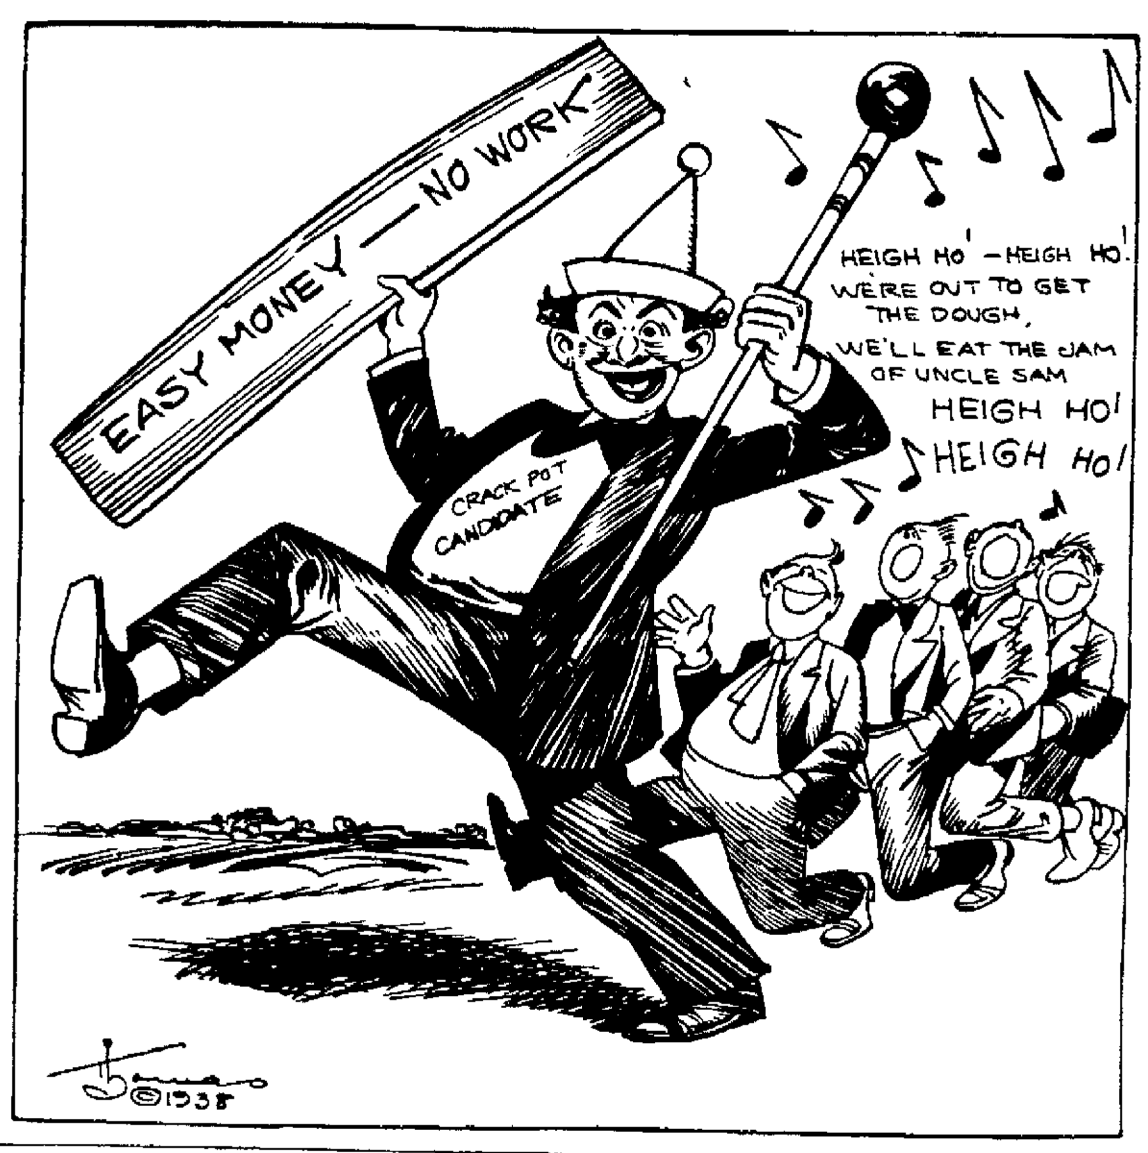
THE MODERN ONE PLANK PLATFORM



Americans More War Conscious

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON—If a general war breaks out in Europe about now, Americans will have a much clearer idea of the calamity's proportions than they did in 1914.

When Archduke Francis Ferdinand was assassinated at Sarajevo, having personally spent several years in old world countries and being somewhat familier with the ticklishness of the situation amongst them, the tragedy struck me as news of capital importance. But I couldn't persuade the managing editor of the San Francisco newspaper I then was working for to issue an extra edition. He said he might have been willing to do so if the Austrian emperor's son had been "bumped off," but he did not consider it worth while for a mere nephew, even though next in line for the throne.

Shortly afterward Austria sent to Serbia her ultimatum—virtually the initial declaration of the world conflict's beginning. The Berlin correspondent of one of our big American news associations cabled 139 words on the subject to his New York headquarters office, and promptly was rebuked from New York for "over-filing Serbia."

* * *

ANOTHER STORY NOW

Today if there should be a good central European political assassination and if an American correspondent on the scene cabled as few as 1,139 words concerning it, he would be rebuked, or maybe fired, for "under-filing."

And WOULD WE GET OUT EXTRAS!

Yes, sir, this time we are European-war conscious.

* * *

NEUTRAL THEN

Another thing:

In 1914 we were pretty neutral, not only officially, but as a people.

Perhaps we very mildly were pro-ally, but not much so.

Then Germany jumped on little Belgium and we began to get a pro-underdog complex, but THAT was not violent.

Next Germany started to sink some of our blockade runners. Next the kaiser sank the Lustania, with a lot of our nationals aboard, greatly aggravating German-American relations. Personally I always thought that our folk ought to have kept off the Lusitania, except as they took their chances. I took mine when, in 1915, I was swishing around in belligerent ships in war-torn waters. I accepted my own risk and so recognized it.

* * *

ANGLO-GERMAN

I thought, and still think, that Britain jammed war in 1914 about as much down Germany's throat as Germany jammed it down Britain's.

And it was an Anglo-German war.

Other participants were only incidental.

Maybe there was a small balance against Germany, but not a heavy one.

* * *

NOW IT'S HITLER

This time is different.

Hitler IS Germany and it's Germany's fault that he is.

I don't believe that any American, or German-American, except some "bund" enthusiast, is Hitleristic.

And I don't believe that there are any Fascists to speak of.

As to Communists?—phooey!

* * *

THE NEW LINEUP

But let a fresh war start?

It would divide itself into a clash between:

1. The despotisms — Germany, Italy and Japan.
2. A question—Russia.
3. Democracy—The U. S. A., Britain and its dependencies, and maybe most of Latin America, plus half of Spain.
4. China? Problematic.

A nice muss!

You and Your Nation's Affairs

The Blight of Government.

By GUS W. DYER
Professor of Economics and Sociology, Vanderbilt University.

The American constitutional theory is that it is not a proper function of government to direct the economic processes of business. The direction of business is fundamentally an economic function, and can be performed successfully only by specialists in the field of business. But it is a proper and an essential function of government to regulate business. Regulation is a judicial function and properly belongs to government.

Under the philosophy of freedom, as expressed in the constitution, it is the function and duty of the government to regulate all activities in human society—in the interest of freedom, justice and fair play. It is the duty of the government to regulate the practice of medicine, the practice of law, marriage and divorce, social institutions and even religious institutions as well as business in the interest of equal rights to all and special privileges to none. But it is not a proper function of government to direct the activities of men "in the pursuit of happiness" in any field.

Under constitutional regulation business in this country has made marvelous progress. Who can point to a single example of real progress in business under governmental direction?

Under governmental regulation, the railroads in this country were successful and prosperous. Under governmental direction the railroads are in a desperate condition today.

In 1916, the railroads were prosperous and had made the whole country prosperous. It was about this time that the government abandoned its constitutional function of regulation and assumed the function of directing the economic processes of the railroad business. Fixing wages, hours of labor and general conditions of service are purely economic functions, and are outside of constitutional judicial regulation. But these and many other economic functions have been taken away from the owners of the railroads and assumed by the government.

When the railroads were prosperous in 1916, they paid 157 million dollars in taxes, and the average amount paid to employes was $892 a year. Under governmental direction, with practically one-third of the railroads in bankruptcy, they are required by the government to pay over 325 million dollars a year in taxes, and the average wages of employes have been raised to $1780 a year.

Under governmental direction a large number of locomotive engineers make their monthly mileage by working from ten to twenty days, for which they receive from $250 to $350 a month. An engineer on a Southern road takes a train 85 miles in two hours and twenty-six minutes. This is counted as a day's work. An engineer on a Western road takes a train 76 miles in one hour and 54 minutes. He is on duty less than three hours, but is paid for a full day's work. On an Eastern road a conductor is on duty nine hours and ten minutes a day for 13 days in the month. This is considered a month's work for which the conductor receives $296.92. The brakeman on this run also works 13 days in the month for which he is paid $213.66.

On June 1, 1938, ninety-seven railroads were in bankruptcy. In the first three months of 1938, railroads operating over 87 per cent of the total railroad mileage did not earn enough to pay the interest and rents for leased roads, and the deficit of all the railroads taken together was $106,000,000. Yet the railroads under governmental direction are forced to pay the highest wages in their history, and carry a tax burden of over 328 million dollars a year. Railroad employes are a power in politics!

Great is the government as a business director!

"As Rich as Croesus."

We don't know and neither does anybody else whether Croesus was as rich as history says he was; but even if his wealth was a fraction of the incalculable sum conjectured by legend, it was sufficient on this account to earn his memory a place in the figurative lexicon of posterity.

Croesus enjoyed a colorful career which itself would have entitled him to respectful consideration; but he has simply come to connote unbounded fortune, plethoric opulence, unlimited command of what it takes.

Succeeding his father Alyattes in 560 B. C. Croesus was the last King of Lydia. He made the Greeks of Asia Minor, among many other peoples, his tributaries.

A Farmer's Diary

Buckwheat In Bloom.

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

I WADED waist deep, at dusk, through the blooming buckwheat field, toward the rising slope against the woods. Each top and terminal branch, held upright on its hollow, pinkish stem, carried a heavy burden of clustering white flowers. The lateral branches were not so high...thus, half way down the height of stalks, the whiteness still appeared, like lace, against the pale green of the dainty, three-cornered leaves.

Seven weeks ago I sowed the seed, just before a shower. In ten days the plants had grown six inches, and had bloom starting on the tender tops. From that time until now, the miracle of bloom is still progressing...while older flowers have faded, and large clusters of three-cornered buckwheat hang along the borders, all shades of green and drab.

In early morning, even before the dew is off, the honey bees from all the country round, come to this field. All day it sounds like a busy hive. Three hundred feet away I can hear their droning. I have often counted eight upon one square foot of space. By easy calculation, that would mean 15 million bees working for me all day, without a single loafer. For without these pollinating bees, I would not have a crop.

The honey they make is dark, and rather strong, but many country people like it well. It has the wild flavor of the buckwheat field, and reminds me of quiet autumn days, cool nights . . . a crisp fall sky.

The blooming heads of buckwheat still persist all through late summer and early fall, until its tender leaves and stems are killed by frost.

The price of this crop is low, but already there is gleaned a wealthy harvest. It may not fill the purse, but it has strewn the countryside with flowers, clothed the bare earth with silent beauty, filled the neighbors' hives with honey, and made our farm a happier place to live.

Listen, World!

"Can Women Be Gentlemen?"—And How!

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

ARE WOMEN BORN LIARS?" "WHY HAVE SO FEW WOMEN THE INSTINCTS OF GENTLEMEN?" "WHY DO WOMEN HATE ONE ANOTHER?"

A clever man once asked Gertrude Atherton these questions. Whereupon that gifted lady proceeded to have a lot of fun, and share it with others, by writing her latest novel—"Can Women Be Gentlemen?" (Houghton, Mifflin Co., Pub.). Upon reading which, you are speedily assured that Mrs. Atherton not only believes that Women Can Be Gentlemen, but that she is also convinced that they can be, will be and have been practically anything else they doggoned please. For which theory she offers some highly diverting evidence . . . which should be particularly interesting to Married Males.

"Maybe you, Bill, have been comforting yourself with the thought that even if you don't make much of a splash in the Family Circle now, you had 'em listening plenty in the Good Old Days. Or you, Jim, may have derived a lot of pleasure out of the notion that, "Us Men Once Kept Women in Her Place and, bigolly, we'll do it again." If so, the following hunk of history is certainly going to hit you with a dull and sickening thud.

For example, did you know that Mama was once the Big Shot in every home, and you were "just a bird in a gilded cage?"

Or had you suspected that, once upon a time, even though you didn't actually produce little Junior, you went to bed with him, when he was three days old, and kept him warm, while Mama went back to her job of running the town?

I'll bet you didn't. So wotta treat the following is going to be to you!

"In the fifth century B. C.," says Mrs. Atherton, "the women of Egypt transacted all the business of the state. They went forth every morning . . . engaged in commerce, banking, law and international relations.

"The husbands stayed indoors and LOOKED AFTER THE HOME. MEN WERE COOKS, CHAMBERMAIDS, NURSES AND WHAT-NOT."

(Hi-ya, What-Not!) Ja'remember to phone for those carrots?)

"UNLESS TOO DISPIRITED, THE HUSBANDS CURLED THEIR HAIR AND BEARDS, SCENTED THEMSELVES, USED PAINT AND KOHL FREELY, PRACTICED ALL THE LITTLE ARTS AND GRACES PECULIAR TO WOMEN ELSEWHERE."

As noted above, Egyptian papas didn't actually give birth to the baby but within three days of that joyful event it was blankets for him! While his six-foot lady (they came like that then) romped back to her interrupted game of stud poker. Or raised Cain generally. For which, as Mrs. Atherton vouches, she was well equipped.

"Those ancient females were tall and strong, as powerful in body as in mind, whereas the men were inferior both in physical and mental development. The women lived their days in the open air, exercised vigorously; from childhood they had been more adequately nourished than the male. The men lived the indoor life, received no physical training, accumulated fat, were permitted to occupy their minds with nothing beyond their household duties and the rearing of children. No doubt they met and gossiped, indulged in sly flirtations or liaisons, became expert in lying, and deceiving their over-ladies."

And you haven't heard the half yet! What a book for gentlemen who still persist in taking their sex seriously! Or, indeed, for ladies with the same obsession, for Mrs. Atherton pokes quite as much fun at the female sex as at the male. Which is quite as it should be. For, after all, is there anything more idiotic in our cockeyed human history than this endless squabble over which is the dominant sex?

THE SIMPLE TRUTH IS . . . EITHER SEX IS USELESS WITHOUT THE OTHER. "Equality" wasn't discovered by shrill suffragettes. It was part of the original design for living . . . and we'll never know happiness until we cut out the cat-calls, quit making faces, and hit the trail together, hand in hand, as we first started.

("CAN WOMEN BE GENTLEMEN" by Gertrude Atherton, Houghton, Mifflin, Pub. A grand, gay, true book. Read it and laugh—and think.)

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—It was about 4:30 in the afternoon and the young man whose face had been sunburned the color of champagne said, "Here, I'll show you. It's easy as pie." He selected a record and placed it on the phonograph. He paused a moment to catch the tempo and then slipped into three minutes of a shuffling-tap dance that was lazily reminiscent of some half-forgotten Memphis street scene.

"You see?" cried Fred Astaire, "that's the Yam. You just get lazy. Then you do this (tap-a-tap-a-tap-a-tap), and this. You can't miss. That's Irving Berlin's Yam."

It was nice seeing Fred Astaire after so long a time away from his old haunts. He was well turned out in a blue double-breasted suit, turned calf shoes, a blue shirt, with socks and tie to match. He and Mrs. Astaire were back for three or four days on a little visit, the last 12 hours of which were spent in a boat off Montauk, fishing. They like to fish.

* * *

TO AMPLIFY this Fred had some photographs along. Not studio portraits. He produced them sort of apologetically, but he needn't have. They disclosed the young man on a wharf standing next to a 210 lb. Marlin swordfish which had been hoisted by a boom. Fred took him in Mexican waters.

"Took me nearly three hours," he exulted. "I foul-hooked him. It usually takes an hour and a half to get a gaff into one of these fellows, but this one wouldn't quit. We were astonished to find, on getting him to the boat, that he had been hooked lightly in the side. I guess they have more chance to fight when they are hooked that way. I didn't understand why he didn't get away."

Fred Astaire does heavy duty aboard salt water yawls when the studios give him time off. But not much of this sweet liberty remains. Perhaps you noticed that Irene Castle McLaughlin was a recent arrival in Hollywood.

* * *

THAT wasn't just a chance arrival. She is there for consultation purposes on a picture that is to portray the life story of Vernon and Irene Castle. Remember the Castles? They were the first great dancing favorites in America. They were the war vogue. Vernon Castle, ex-waiter turned dancer, was the most celebrated dancer of his time.

Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers are going to parallel their romance on the screen. Fred is pleased with this assignment. I don't blame him. If you know the real story of the Castles you will understand how genuinely moving a cinema can be adapted from the romantic and heart-break episodes of their careers, a story that unfolds like the verses of a romantic ballad.

They won't have to change any of the facts to make it a good story. Only, they will change them. They always do. In real life Vernon Castle became an aviator, and was killed. In real life Irene and Vernon Castle epitomized ballroom dancing and their name is a valentine in the hearts of all who saw them.

I'm certainly glad Fred Astaire is going to play Vernon Castle. I can't think of another single name that belongs.

JELLY-MAKING CONTEST WILL END THURSDAY

Entries Must Be Received by 5:30 P. M.; Prizes Will Go to 20 or 25 Winners.

Tomorrow is the deadline for The News-Journal's jelly-making contest, which is being co-sponsored by the American Legion auxiliay. All entries must be at the Ohio Public Service company, South Park street, before 5 30 p m Thursday

So many prizes are being offered that there will be a prize for at least the first 20 or 25 best entries, and the prizes are attractive enough without the added prestige of being labeled among the best jelly makers in the county.

Dozens of calls have been received at the Ohio Public Service company where the contest will be decided, as to the rules and regulations; and all of the printed cards of rules governing the contest were called for within a few days after the contest was announced It promises to be one of the most interesting contests for housewives in several years. But since the contest is open to everyone it would be strange if some man or boy won first prize.

Best of Prizes.

The first prize, incidentally, is worth a lot of effort. It is one of the newest models of Westinghouse Automeal roaster, with grills, steak broiler and all of the newest features

But the second prize is not to be passed over lightly, and it is particularly fitting for the contest. It will be made up of six dozen new jelly glasses, six large boxes of Gulf sealing wax, a complete jelly making kit, six bottles of Certo and six boxes of Sure-jell

After first and second prizes there will be ten copper griddles, jelly glasses, silver jelly servers and two jelly making kits

Judges in the contest are Miss June Mattuck of the Westinghouse Institute, Irene Oberlin, director of the home service department of Ohio Public Service, and a member yet to be chosen from the Legion auxiliary

Judging will take place at 9 a. m Friday, while the prizes will be awarded at 5 p m. Friday by Mrs. Eugene Florey, president of the auxilary.

The prize winning jellies and the prizes will be displayed in the O P S window.

The two most important rules in the contest were that the jelly must be made with Certo or Sure-jell and accompanied by a bottle cap or label off the box; and that there must be two glasses for one entry The jelly will not be returned and one person may enter as many different kinds as she likes

"It usually starts getting lower about 8 o'clock, and by 10 or 11 the gauge shows two or three feet less water And when you stop to think that each foot of water means almost a million and a half gallons of water, that means that plenty of people are taking those baths"

MANSFIELDER BRINGS MICHIGAN BRIDE HERE

Marriage of John H. Kauffman and Elizabeth Caroline Greve of Ann Arbor Gives Mansfield an Attractive Bride.

MANSFIELD'S younger married set will have an addition this fall when John Henry Kauffman brings his bride, the former Elizabeth Caroline Greve of Ann Arbor, here after their Canadian wedding trip. They will reside at 320½ West Third street.

Mr. Kauffman, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse S. Kauffman, Ann Arbor, is technical engineer at the Ohio Brass company of this city. Albert Arnold, Mansfield, accompanied Mr. Kauffman to Ann Arbor to serve as best man at the wedding which took place last Saturday.

The wedding took place in the chapel of the Michigan League building, University of Michigan, with the Rev. Frederick W. Leech, rector of St. Andrew's Episcopal church, reading the service.

The bride wore a lovely bridal gown of white satin, with a three-yard train, a veil of illusion that extended beyond the long train and over that a short veil and Juliet cap of exquisite Duchesse lace. She carried a white prayer book, tied with satin ribbons, which cascaded with clusters of jasmine, lilies-of-the-valley and maidenhair fern. Her sister, Miss Barbara Jane Greve, in a bolero jacket frock of peacock blue moire, and wearing a hat made of a single golden ostrich plume, tied with peacock velvet bows, served as her maid of honor.

During the program of nuptial music preceding the ceremony, Mr. Arnold, who is director of the Mansfield Johnathan Glee club and church soloist, sang "I Love You Truly."

Following the wedding, a reception and supper for 80 guests was held in the garden of the Forest Plaza, summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Greve. The garden is on Lake Michigan.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Kauffman are graduates of the University of Michigan, where he received his bachelors degree in engineering, and she a bachelors and masters degree. She is a member of Phi Kappa Phi honor society. After teaching English for the past year at Reims, France, on a fellowship of the Lycie de Jeunes Filles de Reims, she travelled in England, Austria, Italy and Belgium.

After next week the couple will be at home to their friends in their West Third street apartment.

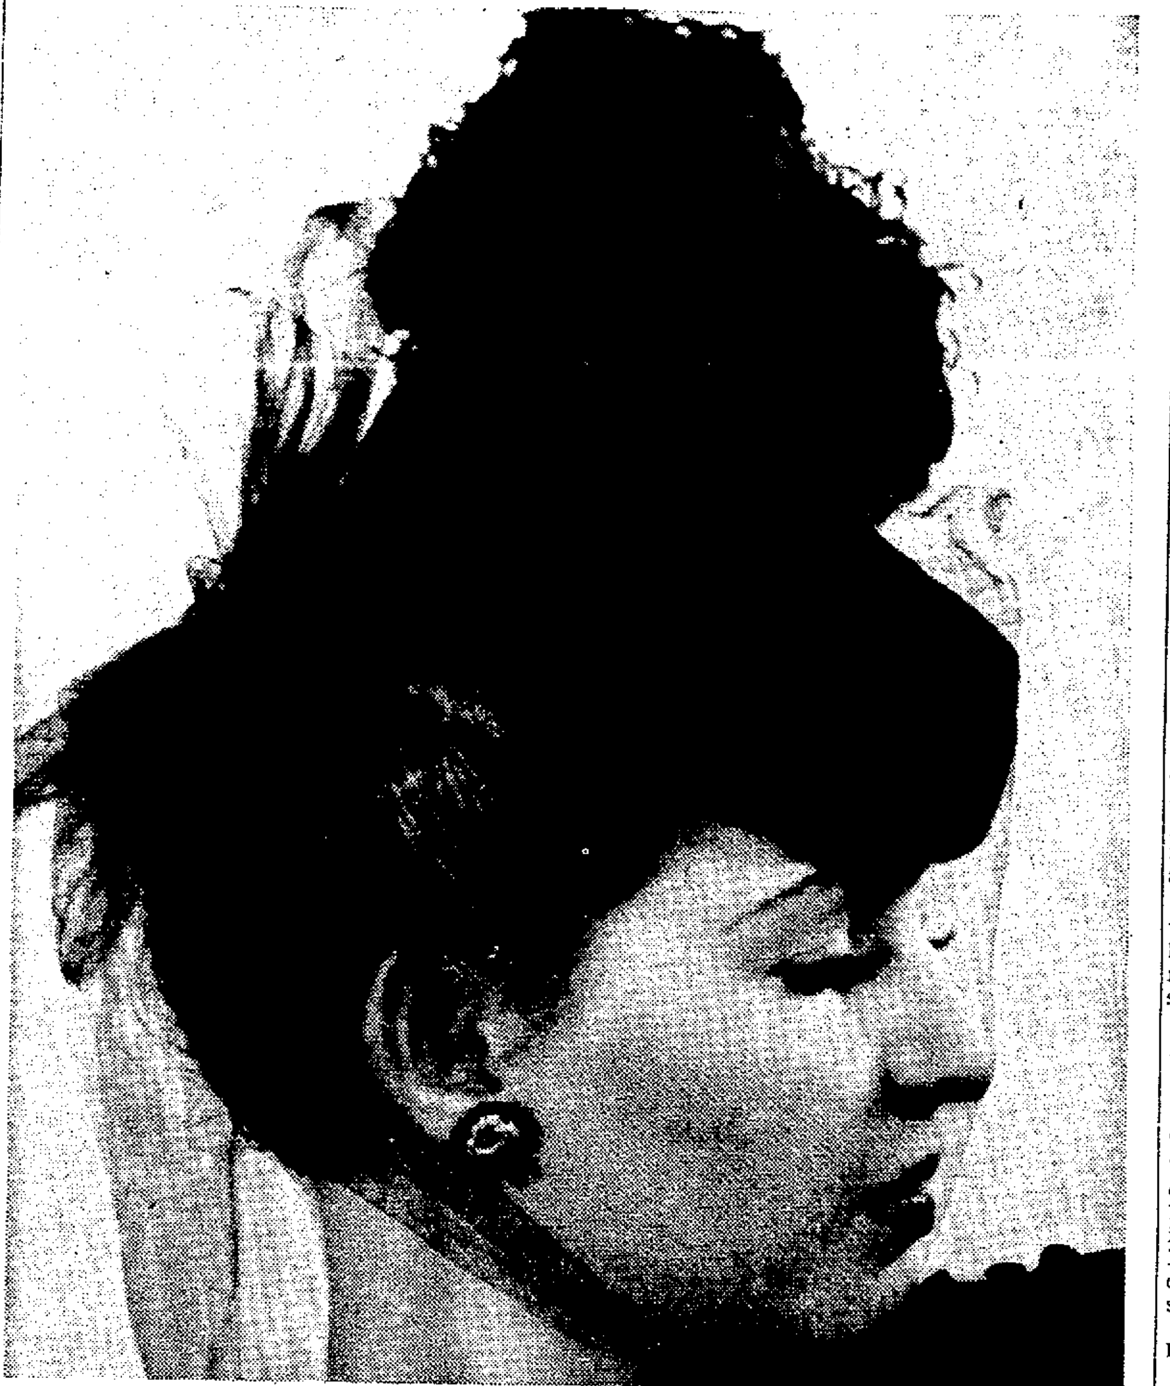
Fall Hats Severe to Fit Upswept Hair



The most radical fashion change in years is that of the upswept coiffure which is very much in vogue at the moment, although it is one of the most difficult of all hair styles to adapt to the average woman. Its influence on hats is tremendous for those little pillboxes and flat chapeaux with birds and plumes can be worn only by the women who dare the severe upswept hair dress. Many of the fall hats have a forward slant to accommodate the hair piled high on the head.
